36,000 making strike decision

By WARREN CARAGATA
Colonist Reporter

About 36,000 forest, fishing, food retailing and hospital workers are taking strike votes in B.C. this week.

About 2,000 members of the Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America will complete their vote this week and the ballots will be counted at the weekend, Roger Lewis, IWA Local 1-118 president, said Thursday night. The other 30,000 members of the coast region of the IWA will finish their votes by the end of next week.

George Johnston, business manager of Local 212 of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers, said Thursday about 800 meatcutters employed by Safeway, Super-Valu, Shop-Easy and independent food stores will finish their vote today and the ballots will be counted either today or Monday.

About 2,500 paramedics represented by the Health Sciences Association employed in 81 B.C. hospitals started taking a strike vote Thursday, and 600 tendermen, members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union will be voting until Wednesday on whether to authorize a strike. Another 2,000 shoreworkers in the fishing industry will vote Wednesday on possible job action.

Lewis said the crucial point in forest industry negotiations will come today when the IWA and the Forest Industrial Relations meet with provincial mediator Fred Geddes. The IWA has asked for an increase of $1 an hour in a one-year contract.

"There is absolutely no movement on the part of the industry. They are provoking things at this stage," Lewis said.

Police believe bandits fled in plane or copter

$1 million Quebec bank heist

Colonist Wire Services

BAIE COMEAU, Que. — A Quebec Provincial Police spokesman in this community, 220 miles northeast of Quebec City, said Thursday police recovered a car used in a $1.06 million bank holdup Thursday morning.

"We recovered the getaway car, a black 1967 Chrysler, about 30 miles from here," he said.

"We have no further clues, though, and we don't expect any arrests for the time being."

It was believed to be the largest bank robbery in Quebec in more than a decade.

The police said earlier three masked men armed with machine guns burst into a branch of Bank Canadian National, at the Manic 3 hydro-electric dam site 50 miles north of here and fled with the money.

"We're pretty sure now the bandits used a plane or helicopter to escape and we've alerted various airports in the area to watch out for them.

"There are 35 to 40 men on the case from the QPP and two municipal forces," he said. "We also expect a QPP helicopter and police dogs to arrive soon."

Police sealed off roads within a 50-mile radius of the holdup and were searching cars at roadblocks.

A police spokesman said earlier the bank's manager and assistant manager were taken hostage by the thieves but were released about 10 miles from the scene of the holdup.

The stolen money was part of a payroll for more than 2,500 Hydro-Quebec employees working at the site.

Police could not say how many employees were in the bank at the time of the robbery and bank officials could not be reached, but no shots were fired and no one was hurt.

A spokesman said the suspects were last seen heading south towards Baie Comeau along a road following the west bank of the Manicouagan River.

Montreal police said the loot taken in the robbery was the most stolen in Quebec since a Montreal bank was robbed of the same amount about a decade ago.

Two weeks ago, bandits drilled into a safety-deposit vault and looted deposit boxes at Lachine, Que. Police believe the robbers took close to $1 million but the exact amount has not been determined.

Queen sends general to Amin

LONDON (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth dispatched a personal messenger to President Idi Amin of Uganda Thursday night in an 11th-hour appeal for the life of a British lecturer facing execution in the East African nation.

The Briton, Dennis Hills, 61, is to go before a firing squad Saturday after conviction of treason. He described Amin in the unpublished manuscript of a book as "a village tyrant."

A Buckingham Palace spokesman said British Army Lt.-Gen. Chandos Blair flew to Kampala with a "personal message from the queen in her role as head of the Commonwealth."

Blair, 56, currently serves with the army's Scottish Command. He was Amin's commanding officer 16 years ago when the Ugandan leader was a member of a British Army unit known as the King's African Rifles.

On the East African Airways flight with Blair was Hills' 15-year-old son Hanson, who said he hoped to visit his father in his death-row cell in Kampala.

Amin also demanded a number of concessions from Britain as his price for sparing the Briton's life. These included supplying military spare parts to Uganda, expelling Ugandan exiles from Britain and stopping what he called "malicious propaganda" emanating from Britain.

Motorcyclist pushes bike against howling clouds of sand near Palm Springs

Cars sandblasted for fourth day

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Driving winds and whirling sands described as "the worst storm in 20 years" whipped through the desert for the fourth straight day Thursday, plaguing motorists who ignored warnings to stay off the highways.

"The winds are still blowing and people who drive the highways can expect to have their cars damaged," said Deidre Woods of the Southern California Automobile Club.

"But some people keep travelling, people who don't live here and don't know how vicious the wind can be. I keep telling them it's bad, but they ask if they can drive anyway. I tell them the roads are open but they have to travel at their own risk."

The main highway near this resort town, Interstate 10, was closed for several hours Tuesday night and Wednesday when winds up to 90 miles per hour piled sand headlight high around cars and stranded hundreds of motorists.

The winds abated somewhat on Wednesday and the highway was reopened to drivers willing to take the risk. Interstate 15, the main freeway between Los Angeles and Las Vegas, Nev., also reopened Wednesday despite continued winds that threatened to leave motorists stranded.

"We've had 300 calls in the past two days," an auto club dispatcher in Palm Springs said Thursday, "and it's only dropping off a little today."

"Most of the cars get stalled from sand in the carburator, or else the windshields get pitted so bad they can't see even though the cars still run.

"We had some overturned trucks too. There were a few cars where the wind blew out the window, and some cars stranded overnight had the paint stripped off right down to the metal. It's unreal."

Indication in Monday's budget

8-cent fuel hike likely

OTTAWA (CP) — Price increases this year for gasoline, home-heating fuel and natural gas probably will be indicated in the federal budget Monday.

Signs point to an increase of eight cents a gallon for gasoline and heating oil.

Although no estimates have been released officially on new prices for crude oil and natural gas to producers, most government and industry sources say they expect an increase of $2 a barrel on oil and one of 20 cents to 30 cents a thousand cubic feet on natural gas.

That would increase the price of gasoline and home-heating fuel by eight cents a gallon and raise the annual natural gas bill of an average homeowner by between $30 and about $45. Such an increase would add $1.5 billion annually to consumer spending.

Ottawa says higher prices are needed to encourage a search for more oil and natural gas in the face of reports that Canada will be short of petroleum in the 1980s.

The industry says it needs both higher prices and some cuts in the tougher resource taxes imposed by Ottawa on them last year.

The industry says that even with a $2 increase for a barrel of oil, now $6.50, companies would lack enough money to step up exploration programs.

They say they hope for some changes in the budget.

"I can't believe Ottawa intends to maintain the exisiting taxes," said a spokesman for the Canadian Petroleum Association. "But there have been no signs of a reduction."

Imperial Oil Ltd. and Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. say the consumer will benefit little from the anticipated increase in crude prices. There would be little money for exploration.

Gulf President Jerry MacAfee estimates that if taxes are unchanged, the companies would get three cents from a

Oil, gas reserves guess plummets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government geologists slashed their estimates of America's Atlantic offshore oil riches by a dramatic 80 per cent Thursday and said the entire nation may have only a third the undiscovered oil and gas resources thought to exist a year ago.

In a detailed report to the Federal Energy Administration, the U.S. Geological Survey said the untapped Atlantic frontier out to a depth of about 650 feet may contain only 2 to 4 billion barrels of oil instead of the 10 to 20 billion estimated in 1974.

For all of the nation's offshore areas, the report showed, estimates of oil resources have been cut from last year's 65 to 130 billion barrels to a much more conservative 10 to 49 billion.

Onshore oil estimates, it showed, now stand at 37 to 80 billion barrels instead of the 135 to 270 billion reported in 1974.

Similar reductions also were made for undiscovered natural gas reserves.

Two lab dogs smoked out

LONDON (AP) — A group of animal lovers said Wednesday it freed two dogs from a laboratory where they were being forced to smoke cigarettes in the search for a cancer-free tobacco substitute. An anonymous caller who telephoned a domestic news agency said one of the dogs wheezed "like a human being who has smoked for 30 years." Imperial Chemical Industries acknowledged that the dogs had disappeared from their kennels.

Leftists jeer at church HQ

Troops aid Catholics

Colonist Wire Services

LISBON — Heavily armed soldiers standing shoulder to shoulder cleared a path through a mob of angry leftists Thursday to let more than 120 Roman Catholic clerics, nuns and laymen escape from the church headquarters where they had been besieged for 17 hours.

Several hundred leftists, some wielding sticks, jeered "Fascists! Fascists!" as the Catholics were loaded aboard canvas-covered army trucks on the sun-drenched Square of the Martyrs.

Antonio Cardinal Ribeiro, the patriarch of Lisbon and the country's ranking prelate, and the other Catholics were chased inside the building Wednesday night by thousands of leftists wielding sticks.

The Catholics had been protesting the takeover of a church-owned radio station by Communist workers and the leftists — who accuse the church of having supported the former right-wing dictatorship — called a counter-demonstration.

The leftists smashed windows and burned a car. On the shell they put a sign: "This car belonged to a priest who worked for the secret police."

Heavily armed police surrounded the building and some of the Catholics escaped Thursday morning. But most refused to leave until the army brought covered trucks to protect them from the mob.

Indian wives seek police shield

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Indian Homemakers Association of B.C. has asked for police protection for some delegates to the group's annual conference in Richmond, association president Rose Charlie said Thursday.

She said in an interview she is arranging protection for women who spoke out at the conference against the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs' policy of rejecting government funds.

No incidents occurred at the conference, which ended Thursday, but some delegates said they were concerned about their safety when they returned to their home reserves.

An RCMP spokesman in Richmond said Mrs. Charlie has written an official note to the police.

"We are certainly acting to assess it and will provide assistance if required," said the spokesman.

Irene Harris of Chemainus said in an interview the band office was broken into Wednesday and files taken.

She also said some members on her reserve had accused her of using band funds for the conference and she expected to face further accusations when she gets home.

Agnes Dick of the Sheshat band at Port Alberni and Mrs. Harris both said at the conference the Indian leaders are putting children in the front lines to force a settlement on land claims by rejecting government aid.

Mrs. Dick said the conference was intimidated by Indian leaders and that those bands which wish to continue government funding are harassed.

"I have nothing against the land-claim issue," Mrs. Dick said Thursday. "But the people who are pushing it don't consult the majority."

$2 increase. The remainder would be split between the governments, Alberta taking an extra $1.47 and Ottawa 50 cents.

Besides exploration, Ottawa has other reasons for raising the domestic price of oil. A federal fund was set up to subsidize the cost of foreign oil imported for use in eastern Canada at the higher international rate, about $11 a barrel.

The subsidy ensures that consumers east of the Ottawa River valley, dividing most of Ontario and Quebec, pay no more than the domestic price of $6.50 a barrel of crude oil. The subsidy is expected to cost the government anywhere from $300 million to $500 million this year.

The subsidy is a direct result of the fact that western Canada oil fuels Western Canada and goes in dwindling amounts to the U.S. while eastern Ontario, Quebec and the Atlantic provinces use higher-cost foreign oil.

The subsidy has been financed by a tax on oil exported to the United States, but exports are expected to average 650,000 barrels a day this year, down from the peak of more than one million barrels daily.

The industry and the Alberta government say they hope Ottawa will change its stand on the resource tax issue but that they see little hope as they await the budget.

At issue is a decision by the federal government last year to levy a tax on royalties paid to the provinces by the resource companies, a move the provinces and industry oppose as double taxation and an intrusion into provincial jurisdiction over resources.

In its budget last November, Ottawa stood firm on the resource tax issue but it did relax exploration write-offs and tax abatements to give the industry an additional $100 million.

Faced with that decision, the Alberta government, producer of 85 per cent of the country's oil, eased its own tax and royalty provisions, giving the companies a further $130 million.

Finance Minister John Turner says the combination of the two tax cuts should put the industry in a healthy position.

The oil companies disagree, saying governments still are taking too great a slice of production income and leaving little to finance new exploration.

End to life sentences urged

Proposals would cut back jail population drastically

OTTAWA (CP) — The Law Reform Commission of Canada has suggested abolition of life imprisonment for any offence and says no sentence should be longer than 20 years.

"No sentence of imprisonment should deny hope to the offender," the commission says in a working paper released Thursday.

Currently non-capital murder, manslaughter, rape, break and entry of a dwelling, and some drug offences carry a possible life sentence.

The commission rejects rehabilitation or deterrence as grounds for imprisonment. It says imprisonment can be justified only on three grounds:

● Separation of offenders who represent a serious threat to the life or personal security of others. The maximum should be 20 years, with progressive release procedures tied to conduct.

● Denunciation of behavior regarded as reprehensible because of its violation of fundamental values. Sentences should be no longer than three years. Offenders in this category would include, for example, those who abused trust or public office, or persons convicted of murder or other serious crimes who are unlikely to hurt other persons.

● Wilful refusal to pay a fine or pay restitution to a victim, or to meet terms of probation. Six months should be the maximum in these cases.

The commission notes that one Canadian in 1,000 is in jail today — 20,000. About 75,000 are incarcerated each year in federal, provincial or municipal jails.

About one-half the 4,000 persons sent to federal prisons each year have committed nonviolent offences. Fewer than 20 per cent of those in federal or provincial prisons are there as a result of violence.

"Almost 50 per cent of prisoners in some provincial institutions were imprisoned because they could not pay fines," the commission notes.

One first offender in seven charged with non-violent offences goes to jail. Almost 50 per cent of second offenders in this category are jailed.

The commission describes prison as costly, not only to the prisoners but also to guards, prison officials and society.

"What does imprisonment do not only to the captive but to the captor?" the commission asks. "What social and psychological forces press upon his personality? Are these sufficiently recognized as a cost society passes on to the prison worker and his family."

Keeping a person in prison costs up to $14,000 a year. In addition there are often welfare costs to keep his family.

Fewer than 17 per cent of federal prisoners are engaged in industrial work. Wages rarely exceed $13.50 a month. Taxes, restitution, family obligations aren't met.

The cost to the prisoner himself is sometimes suicide, often " lessening of respect for the administration of justice" as he tries to cope with the court, then the prison officials, then the parole officials.

"The problem is that the various statutes do not reflect a common or coherent philosophy," the commission notes.

Within the prison itself, the prisoners have their own system of justice.

"It is at least partially true that large security prisons can only be run with the cooperation and tacit consent of the prisoners," the commission notes. "There are understood limits beyond which the administration may go only at its peril.

"Yet the almost invisible and non-accountable nature of the prisoners' power results in tension, coercion and injustice within the institutions."

Killings of prisoners, often sex offenders regarded with contempt by others, aren't uncommon in Canadian prisons.

Prisoners also are beaten by other prisoners, or forced to submit to homosexual acts.

"Perhaps these costs are inevitable as long as imprisonment means a place — putting people in boxes and keeping them there," the commission says.

The commission also recommends that:

● The habitual offender law, by which a person may be imprisoned indefinitely, be abolished. It says the law is applied unevenly across Canada and often to petty offenders rather than to dangerous or professional criminals. The commission says "crime's upper management" is rarely touched.

● The 1948 dangerous sexual offender law be abolished and such offenders be dealt with under ordinary sentencing law. Furthermore, a judge should be appointed to look into the cases of those now in prison with the object of establishing a release program, periodic review of their cases, and an end to these life sentences — only "after a period of successful living in the community."

Teacher wins $67,300 in libel action

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A B.C. Supreme Court jury Thursday awarded school teacher Barbara Haight $67,300 in damages as the result of a libel and slander action.

Harry Robb, principal of Arthur Hatton elementary school and main defendant, had damages assessed against him amounting to $32,300 after the jury found he had libelled and slandered Miss Haight. The jury awarded $30,000 for libel.

Six other defendants had judgments totalling $35,000 against them—all for libel.

Miss Haight claimed she suffered mental anguish and duress as a result of reports and letters critical of her as a person and as a teacher that were sent to Charles Bruce, superintendent of schools for the Kamloops district.

The other judgments were against:

Carolyn Moyer, mother of a student, $5,000; Virginia Cross, another mother, and school principal Jack Harper, who were jointly charged with libel, $8,000; principal Rachael Coulpier, $8,000; principal Neil Toews $5,000, and principal Ralph Shaw $9,000.

His comments were echoed by Reg Ginn, president of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada (PPWC), whose union also meets today with the pulp industry, represented by Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau.

Ginn said today's meeting with the bureau will be important, "but I'm not very optimistic."

He accused the companies of playing games and said they have no intention of negotiating an agreement.

The industry is angry with the provincial government for increasing stumpage rates and forcing companies to install expensive pollution abatement equipment and it is trying to provoke a strike, shutting down the forest industry — the province's most important — to embarrass the government, Ginn charged.

The PPWC has not yet developed a strategy to deal with the companies' tactics, he said, and is not planning a strike vote at this time.

The strategy, when worked out, will be discussed with the woods unions' liaison committee, set up by the PPWC, the IWA and the Canadian Paper Workers' Union, which is also involved in negotiations with the pulp and paper industry.

Mediator Ken Albertini is now involved in the pulp talks, but Ginn said he expected the employers would ask him to withdraw today.

The unions consider today's meetings with the industry important enough that they have scheduled a meeting of the liaison committee for Saturday morning.

Meanwhile, the chairman of Forest Industrial Relations said in a statement Thursday in Vancouver the industry is threatened with "unwarranted wage increases" at a time when poor housing starts in the United States and inflation is hurting the industry.

Peter Bentley, who is also president of Canadian Forest Products, called on the three unions to "become realistic in their demands."

"We cannot pay continually escalating wages and maintain competitive product prices unless we get some compensating improvement in labor productivity per man hour," he said.

The IWA demand actually amounts to a $4 an hour boost, he said, and if "there is to be a viable future," the escalating demands of government and labor must be reversed, Bentley said.

The statement also included a report from the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau which said investors are not interested in B.C.'s pulp industry because of low profits.

Both Ginn and Lewis said the unions hear the same thing from the industry every year.

Last year, Lewis said, the companies said the industry was cyclical and large increases couldn't be given because the companies had to save for a coming slump.

Meanwhile, Johnston said the meatcutters union and the companies, represented by the newly-formed Food Industry Labor Relations Council, will meet next week with mediator Ed Sims.

The union has asked for increases ranging from 42.6 per cent to 87.2 per cent in wages and fringe benefits, while the companies have offered increases of 12.4 per cent, which Johnson said was "unacceptable."

The council is also negotiating witht the Retail Clerks Union but local president Rudy Krickan would not comment Thursday night on the status of the talks.

In the fishing industry, the tendermen, who work on packing boats, are asking for increases of $30 a day, based on a 12-hour work day, Ron Keely, vice-president of the tendermen's unit of the union, said.

They now receive $60 a day, but Keely said there is no control on how many hours a day they work. The Fisheries Association of B.C. has responded with a $50-a-month increase.

It is expected the tendermen will authorize a strike, but Keely said they won't stop work on their own.

A strike would also include fishermen and shoreworkers, who bargain jointly with the tendermen, Keely said.

"I think there will be a strike, but I'm hoping there won't be," Keely said.

Whitecaps edged out

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Whitecaps played their third consecutive North American Soccer League overtime game and lost 3-2 Thursday night to San Jose Earthquakes before 9,424 fans.

The defeat left Vancouver in second place in the Western Division, five points behind the idle Seattle Sounders, who also have a game in hand.

Whitecaps twice came from behind in regulation time to tie the score.

Ilija mitic scored his second goal of the game at seven minutes of the sudden-death overtime to give the Earthquakes the victory and consolidate their hold on third place.

In a communique Thursday night, the Communist party condemned the demonstrations and counter-demonstrations at the patriarch's residence as "serving the interest of counter revolutionaries."

The party denied official participation in the rallies.

In another part of the capital, Communist printers were again in control of the Socialist party newspaper Republica in a see-saw battle that Socialist sources said reflected a power struggle within the ruling armed forces.

Since Monday, the military government and COPCON, the military security force, have taken turns promising Republica to its Socialist editors and handing it over to Communist printers.

Under the latest agreement, worked out Wednesday between Socialist party leader Mario Soares and Premier Vasco Goncalves, the editors and printers were to enter the building together Thursday and open negotiations on a working agreement.

But an officer barred editors from entering and said he had orders from COPCON to let only workers in. COPCON, or Continental Operational Command, has recently displayed increasing independence under the command of ultra-leftist Brig. Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho.

The Socialists have previously threatened to quit the government unless the paper is returned to them, but officials said Thursday the party was waiting for the outcome of what they described as a power struggle within the upper echelons of the armed forces.

Senior military officers have been in almost constant session since last Friday and the growing expectation was that they would declare a miltration with the persistent itary dictatorship out of frusclashes among various civilian parties.

gorde hunter

THE FLAT EARTH SOCIETY thrives in the political jungle of British Columbia. There is never any shortage of prospective members and executive officers are easy to come by.

Recently, a strong new candidate surfaced, made his proposal and moved smartly into a contending postion for the office of president.

William Leonard Hartley, public works minister in the Barrett brigade, has suggested that the old Imperial Oil service station at the Inner Harbor causeway, be turned into a take-out delicatessen, a beanery, a greasy spoon.

THE IDIOCY of the whole thing is mind boggling. Peter Pollen and his council have been working their butts to the bone for a number of years in an attempt to clean out the whole Inner Harbor eyesore.

They succeeded in eliminating Ocean Cement. They did extensive beautification and structural work on the causeway itself. They fought the Reid Centre and finally savored the fruits of victory when Dave Barrett bought out the Reid interests.

The removal of the service station itself was another plan to beautify the corner.

AND NOW Bill Hartley would throw in a delicatessen. He would, in effect, replace that hideous Rococo tower with, say, a Macdonald's golden arch sort of thing. Complete with neon signs, no doubt.

The whole thing is preposterous and the seamy side of politics enters into it when you consider the methods used to gain control of this property.

To start with, the city sold the land to the Capital Improvement District Commission with the full understanding said property would be developed in harmony with council wishes.

THE COMMISSION, however, somehow or other sold the land to public works, and Ald. Mike Young says this violated the initial sales agreement entered into by the City of Victoria with the commission.

What can be done to save the site, to thwart the flat earth society concept?

Once again it would appear to be in the hands of the citizens of our town. You might remember the strong public objection to the modernistic mountain of glass and concrete that Sandy Reid wanted to foist on the Inner Harbor. Victorians became involved, they wrote letters, they attended council hearings, they shouted.

SHOUTING TIME again, letter writing time too — to Premier Barrett, to William Leonard Hartley, to the Victoria members, Newell Morrison and David Anderson.

The premise is false — you CAN fight city hall and you CAN fight the Legislative Buildings and a good deal of public spunk is necessary at this time to tell the flat earth society what to do with its attempts at honky tonk commercialization of what has to be the most important area of our city.

Take up the quill — now . . .

I THINK it worth mentioning that one of the hardiest of entertainment stars hits our city for a four-night engagement at the Stardust next week.

I think it worth mentioning because Lonnie Donegan, the Irish Hillbilly, has been doing a thoroughly great job of entertaining audiences for the past 20 or more years and he still draws packed houses wherever he appears.

Somebody once said not to expect great music from Donegan — nothing but jovial, good-time entertainment, plain and simple. He is a typical British showman, he owns his crowds, he gets them involved in the merriment.

Bob Smith, the highly-regarded jazz expert of The Vancouver Sun, once did a review on a Donegan show and admitted he was delightfully amazed that Donegan could manage to keep crowd interest from flagging through the memory lane medley. Smith reviewed Donegan this way:

"For more than an hour he kept an eager, friendly full house weaving and swaying with laughter or oohs and aahs like a wheatfield in a windstorm.

"Come to think of it, that is not a bad parallel because the greater part of his material is down home and pure corn, but delivered with such flair that it is easy to forget when you are on one of Donegan's downhill hayrides."

You have been forewarned.

Your good health

By G. C. THOSTESON, M.D

Dear Doctor: I am 65 years old and have just had a diagnosis of a hernia. Should I have it operated on, or can I delay the operation a year or so without too much risk? What precautions should I take in the meantime? Should I wear a support, curtail my activities?

How should I handle the situation? — — Mr. M. V. A.

Until you see your doctor again you should avoid heavy lifting and straining at stool.

Delaying necessary surgery could be courting trouble, and only your doctor can determine whether surgery is necessary and how much of a factor time is.

The hernia can become larger, and it could strangulate, further damaging the supportive tissue in the area. In short, improperly attended to, the hernia could create a rather messy situation for you.

A support can give temporary relief for a small hernia, but at best it is only a partial answer and can be a troublesome nuisance, especially in the hot climate where you live.

Barge blaze

Firefighters, lower right, fight gasoline blaze on one of three barges Thursday morning at Exxon terminal in Nashville, Tenn. Fire, that erupted when transfer pipe split, left one barge crewman missing and presumed dead, said a fire marshall. Barges are owned by Vickers Towing Co., Greenville, Miss.

Fisheries meet closes

Canada loses limit plea

EDINBURGH, Scotland (CP) — A crucial conference on Atlantic fisheries closes today, but without accepting Canadian pleas for reduced foreign fishing off Canada's East Coast.

Lack of action on the Canadian proposal by the International Commission for the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries means the Canadian government again faces the possibility of unilateral declaration of fisheries jurisdiction 200 miles off shore.

Sources said Thursday that the best Canada could achieve at the closed-door conference was agreement to hold a second meeting on the issue in the autumn.

The Canadian delegation, under Alfred Needler of St. Andrew's, N.B., has proposed that other countries in the 17-country ICNAF cut their fishing effort off Canada's shores by 40 per cent of 1973 levels during next year's season.

Needler refused to comment on progress of the 10-day meeting on the eve of the final session.

But informed sources said several delegations want to consult their governments before continuing talks on the Canadian initiative.

Faced with that lack of agreement, Needler has recommended another meeting perhaps in September or October, and possibly in Ottawa — in an attempt to get adoption of the Canadian proposal.

Observers differed, however, on whether Canada would act before the next ICNAF meeting to take jurisdiction itself over the rich fishing grounds from the tip of Labrador to Georgia's Bank south of Nova Scotia.

One official close to the talks predicted that Canada will await the outcome of the autumn meeting. Others, however, did not rule out the possibility that Canada will take the issue into its own hands to control over-fishing.

ICNAF estimates that foreign fleets caught about 1.4 million metric tons of fish in areas off Canada in 1973. Canada is urging other countries to cut their numbers of vessels — or the number of fishing day — by 40 per cent, while leaving Canadians free to take whatever amount they can.

In those same areas in 1973, Canadian fishermen caught about 885,000 metric tons, ICNAF figures show.

No action planned on foreign fleets

OTTAWA (CP) — Immediate unilateral extension of Canada's territorial fishing limit "would involve us in serious confrontation," with other nations, External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said Thursday in the Commons.

He rejected an opposition call for immediate extension to the edge of the continental shelf because there "is no assurance that foreign vessels would recognize our declaration."

The opposition has been complaining that foreign fleets are overfishing many areas off Canada's coasts.

Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc said unilateral action never works.

He said some countries deliberately are violating international fishing agreements.

"We are not going to tolerate this," he said. "We will use every means available to stop it."

He mentioned closing of ports to these fleets as one means.

MacEachen said Canada would have problems "enforcing on short notice its new jurisdiction against the fleets of other nations."

Arthritic Pains?

Today, all over Canada, many men and women who suffer from arthritic or rheumatic pain are using a new medicated rub to get fast, effective relief. It's called EXOCAINE*.

There's nothing exactly like this proven medicated rub. You see, EXOCAINE* contains a recognized analgesic to relieve arthritic pain; plus a fast-acting anesthetic to help temporarily desensitize nerve endings that transmit such pain. So you may move around more comfortably. Up to hours at a time.

Don't let the discomforts and pains of arthritis needlessly interfere with your work, your sleep, your life. Today, get EXOCAINE MEDICATED RUB at any drug counter.

Egypt displeased

Golan included in Israel map

TEL AVIV (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and his Labor party have defined Israel's permanent borders — including annexation of the Golan Heights and the Gaza strip — in a peace plan for negotiations with the Arabs, the secretary-general of the party said Thursday.

A Syrian leader said in London that his government is determined to regain the Golan Heights in any Middle East settlement. Egypt denounced the plan as "unacceptable manoeuvring."

The plan makes the Golan Heights and the Gaza strip — captured from Syria and Egypt, respectively, in the 1967 war — permanent parts of the state of Israel, said party chief Meir Zarmi.

It establishes the Jordan River as Israel's final security border but leaves the sovereignty of occupied west Jordan open to negotiations, Zarmi told a meeting of Labor party farmers.

Israel will retain a presence in strategic Sharm el Sheikh at the southern end of the Sinai Peninsula but is prepared to negotiate the region's final sovereignty with Egypt, he said. This indicated that Rabin's party was willing to return the rest of the vast Sinai Desert and its oilfields to Egypt.

The party peace plan was tantamount to official Israeli policy since the Labor alignment dominates the coalition government. But any peace agreement with the Arabs would need approval in parliament where Labor does not hold a majority.

Labor party spokesman Zvi Harmor said that it was a "word map" or set of policies, not an actual chart with frontiers drawn on paper.

Scots lead toothless

EDINBURGH (Reuter) — Scotland is the most toothless country on record in the world, a government report says.

A recent survey showed 44 per cent of Scots aged 16 or over had lost all their teeth, and only 2 per cent could be called dentally fit.

Let workers in for Alberta jobs

EDMONTON (CP) — The immigration point system should be amended to fill Alberta's growing labor shortage by allowing more unskilled workers into the country, Edmonton Mayor William Hawrelak said Thursday.

Hawrelak, presenting the city's brief to the parliamentary committee on immigration said there were 35,000 jobs to be filled in the province.

Edith Rogers, retired school trustee, said in a private submission that the British component of Canada's population had declined from 60 to 45 per cent since the last war, while the French component remained at about 30 per cent.

A green paper proposal to encourage French-speaking immigrants would further erode the ethnic status quo, she said.

Westerners are alarmed at a growing French influence in Ottawa, she said and fed up with a situation where "Quebec is making the rules and Alberta pays the bills."

Lionel Beaudoin (SC-Richmond) said he found Mrs. Rogers' remarks "offensive, to say the least," and added, "I am not the least bit interested in what she has to say."

Doug Roche (PC-Edmonton Strathcona) told the committee few westerners shared Mrs. Rogers' "unfortunate" views, which he described as "arrant nonsense."

Women's agenda

Equality list has 11 points

NEW YORK (UPI) — Organizations claiming combined memberships of 30 million women Thursday unrolled the first U.S. National Women's Agenda — 11 items they say are needed to make women equal participants in society.

The agenda will be presented Tuesday at the International Women's Year conference in Mexico City.

On July 15, it will be presented to President Ford's commission on International Women's Year.

It lists these points:

- Fair representation and participation in the political process;
- Equal education and training;
- Meaningful work and adequate compensation;
- Equal access to economic power;
- Quality child care for all children;
- Quality health care services;
- Adequate housing;
- Fair and humane treatment in the criminal justice system;
- Fair treatment by and equal access to media and the arts;
- Physical safety;
- Respect for the individual.

In Mexico City, President Luis Echeverria told the opening session of the world conference of International Women's Year that the crusade for women's rights was meaningless without a total "transformation of the world economic order."

Gale of protest

THE MOUNTING DISTRESS AND DISGUST of many Canadians over the treatment of Dr. Henry Morgentaler are aggravated by fear that a fundamental of freedom, trial by jury, is in danger of abrogation in the course of his prosecution.

Dr. Morgentaler was acquitted on a charge of abortion in 1973, but the Quebec Court of Appeal over-ruled the jury verdict and, instead of ordering a new trial, convicted him and sentenced him to 18 months in prison. This in itself was enough to cause uneasiness, but when the Supreme Court of Canada upheld the Quebec Court of Appeal there was consternation.

A former dean of the McGill University law school, Frank Scott, says the decision "renders the jury trial concept ridiculous."

Then, on the heels of the Supreme Court ruling, the Quebec City justice department preferred a second, in effect, identical charge against Dr. Morgentaler.

"They want to bring him to his knees," a Montreal lawyer commented, "make him plead guilty and confess that he has sinned."

Once again the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty. And once again the prosecution is appealing the acquittal.

Since Dr. Morgentaler readily admits to having performed 5,000 abortions in his clinic for humanitarian reasons, the current process by virtue of the precedents established by the higher courts, could keep him in prison for the rest of his life.

The case has more than religious, political and racial overtones — Dr. Morgentaler is a Polish-born survivor of the death camps at Dachau and Auschwitz — now that there are charges of ill-treatment by guards in the prison where he was confined before removal to a minimum-security establishment and finally to University Hospital Centre in Sherbrooke, Que.

Quebec Justice Minister Jerome Choquette says these charges, contained in a letter allegedly smuggled out of the prisbn, are lies. And perhaps they are. But is that any excuse for Federal Minister Otto Lang to dodge the issue when Conservative leader Robert Stanfield demanded in the Commons an independent inquiry? One would think not. But Mr. Lang directed Mr. Stanfield to take his proposal to Mr. Choquette, a timorous way of escape.

It is noteworthy that Laura Sabia, chairman of the Ontario Advisory Council on the Status of Women, has condemned the federal government's refusal to intervene. "Choquette wants his (Dr. Morgentaler's) head, and those stupid, spineless creatures in Ottawa are doing nothing because it's happening in Quebec," she charges.

Less emotional but more disturbing is the summation of the Ontario Criminal Lawyers' Association which holds that the highest court in the land has destroyed a fundamental principle of democracy in allowing the reversal of a jury acquittal.

John Diefenbaker, former prime minister, calling for a new federal law to prevent an appeal court for substituting its own view for that of a jury and pronouncing a sentence instead of allowing a new trial, has made a move for the preservation of the jury trial, relic of Magna Carta, and the democratic principle it represents.

Since any such safeguard would provoke Quebec, it is safe to predict the Trudeau administration will reject it.

Meanwhile, Dr. Morgentaler lies in hospital, increasingly a figure of tragedy, a victim of persecution and a reproach to the conscience of many Canadians and the storm of which he is the centre shows no sign of abating.

Water for the peninsula

A SHORTAGE OF WATER on the Saanich Peninsula may be leading to a confrontation between the "haves" and the "have nots." The question inevitably arises: who should pay, and how, for the installation of a system to provide the peninsula's municipalities with an adequate supply?

The point is made that the cost of such a system has been estimated at $12 million to $15 million, said to be far beyond the means of about 18,000 persons in Central Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney. But the Greater Victoria Water District, which has the water, believes they alone should pay for the extension of the mains.

There's logic in this attitude, and some might hold also that the three northern municipalities, if they become part of the present Greater Victoria system, should have to "buy in" to some extent; pay for some of the development already undertaken in anticipation of future needs. But there is common sense, on the other hand, in recognizing that long argument can only result in higher costs and bigger problems, and that compromise is likely in the end.

Clues to what such a compromise might entail lie in the fact that the Greater Victoria water system has been much expanded over the last two and a half decades in a way that has inflicted very little financial pain on the people of the member municipalities.

After the Second World War, Victoria, which owned the system, found itself facing the need to expand it but in no position to raise the capital. The solution was that the four core municipalities formed the water district, which bought the system, paying $3,372,628 over 15 years with its revenue from water sales to the municipalities and from watershed logging.

The municipalities in turn retail the water to their residents at various rates, but none so high as to bring screams of protest. The people of Greater Victoria have relatively low-cost water.

If the Saanich Peninsula residents were to have to pay the whole cost of the extension of service, presumably through borrowing over 15 or 20 years, the expense would indeed be high in addition to the cost of the water itself — possibly in the range of $250 per household per year. But shared among all the users of the regional district, it would be a mere tenth of that or less.

This may not be the answer. But it may point in the right direction.

Food glut cuts world prices

By BARRY WILSON from London

The world usually becomes aware of international economic trends too late to do anything about them. This is now very much the case with food production.

The nations ran into what proved to be a fairly critical food shortage in late 1972, through 1973 and into 1974.

At the World Food Conference in Rome late last year delegates fulminated on the social, moral, economic and political ramifications of what was seen as the beginning of an inevitable clash between rising populations and narrowing agricultural production potential.

Nothing very useful by way of alleviating the alleged problem emerged from the conference although there seemed to be general agreement that all countries, especially the poor developing ones, should devote far more of their scarce resources to food production.

What most of the delegates refused to acknowledge — or maybe were ignorant of — was that events had already passed them by.

Why most of the world's developing countries increasingly diverted resources out of food production and into manufacturing industries throughout the fifties and sixties was simply that it made good economic sense.

For the first 25 years after the Second World War, while the prices of manufactured goods increased steadily every year, the prices of most raw materials and food commodities stubbornly refused to rise — and thus fell in real terms.

Thus if made very good sense indeed to buy food and commodities on the world market and concentrate at home on secondary industry growth.

This trend was transformed radically in the great commodity price boom of 1973-74.

The price of metals trebled. The price of cereal grains soared three and four times. Sugar prices leaped 800 per cent. The price of meat doubled. Dairy products soared.

This had enormous consequences all over the world.

But one of the most important consequences — and one of the most predictable — was a new incentive to produce food and commodities.

It didn't need long-winded speeches from well-meaning politicians in Rome to get developing countries to divert investment into food production. This was already being done, and not as a result of exhortation but because of pure economic necessity or opportunism or both.

★ ★ ★

For example, for years the West Indian sugar industry had been in decline. Last year began the big bounce back in response to the huge increase in price. All over the sugar-growing world plans for expansion went into effect.

Many countries plunged large sums into massive beef cattle projects. Even two years ago the Food and Agricultural Orgainzation said the world would be critically short of red meat for the rest of this century.

As the price of oilseeds such as soybeans, groundnuts, linseed, sunflower seed and rape seed soared so governments and private interests leaped to fill the supply gap.

For 20 years up to 1972 the world had been over-supplied with cereal grains and the main exporters — the United States, Canada, Australia and Argentina — had been forced to reduce production drastically and still they piled up huge, unsaleable surpluses. From 1972 suddenly there was a dire world shortage of grains.

Today the pendulum is swinging the other way. The threat of international surpluses is looming again.

The pockets of famine in northern India, Bangladesh, on the southern edge of the Sahara and in Ethiopia are tragic and heart-rending. But they distort the international reality.

The world price of wheat has fallen from last year's peak of 110 pounds a ton to 65 pounds. American corn, the main internationally traded feedgrain, has dropped from 75 pounds to 52 pounds a ton in recent months. The reason is simply that most people in the trade are very confident of a big surplus in grain production this year.

The huge expansion of grain production would have taken place last year but for climatic problems in North America, South America, the Soviet Union, Africa, India and Australia. This year, with normal weather, there could be all-time record grain crops in many parts of the world.

As with so many things the view depends on your position. Beef cattle fatteners in Argentina and Australia could be forgiven for scorning the platitudes of those forecasting doom and famine spreading across the globe at a time when they cannot sell their beef for love nor money.

★ ★ ★

The present world beef glut is totally without precedent. In the last five years, with prospect of good markets for years ahead, Australia increased its beef herd from 20 million to 30 million head, the Argentinians from 50 million to 60 million head, the Americans from 115 million to 130 million, the Russians from 100 million to 110 million, the EEC from 70 million to 78 million.

Last year the world beef market collapsed under the weight of massive over-supply. The price of fat cattle in Australia dropped by three-quarters and now millions of cattle in Australia, Argentina and elsewhere are being left to die because it is uneconomic to butcher them.

It is now reckoned that it will be two years before beef exporters can make profits again.

What of sugar? The price on the world market last year jumped to 650 pounds a ton. Today it has plunged to 150 pounds a ton. There was no massive world shortage last year.

There were huge crop losses in Britain and Western Europe and world price soared simply because Britain said it would not sign supply agreements with non-EEC suppliers.

★ ★ ★

In fact there was an all-time world record crop of sugar cane last year and it will be even bigger this year. There are also likely to be record sugar beet crops in Britain, the rest of the EEC and the U.S.S.R. this year.

It is difficult to find anyone who seriously believes that the world price of sugar will do anything but fall for the rest of this year.

Politicians who continue to forecast that the world is nearing the time when there will not be enough food and too many people should try producing and selling it — even at any old price. The picture would look very different to them then.

It is of course true that some of the hungrier of the world's inhabitants are simply unable to afford to buy food on the world market, certainly at the inflated prices of a year ago. But these instances are not typical.

The world's big producers have always been generous with food aid when supplies allowed. Right now the world is running into a period when the food exporters will probably have little option but to provide generous handouts as they are going to face great difficulty in finding enough commercial buyers.

Government by consensus?

By F. W. GROVER

Pierre Elliot Trudeau, the swinging new-style politician, campaigned in 1968 on a three-plank platform — participatory democracy, the just society and . . . Forgotten the third? Don't let it bother you. Mr. Trudeau promptly forgot all three. Actually, he campaigned with handshakes, smiles, shopping centre rallies, kissing pretty girls and diving into motel swimming pools.

Participatory democracy manifested itself in three ways, once the Trudeauites were in power.

The first was Information Canada, the super-flak organization that was to streamline the outflow of government information and provide a channel for public views to policy-makers.

It now runs a government bookstore — something that the Queen's Printer managed quite successfully before — and refers callers to other government departmental information offices for the data they require.

★ ★ ★

The second was to commission a flock of private consultants to analyze a variety of aspects of the Canadian scene. Then having spent a lot of the taxpayers' money gathering the information, the Liberals fought like tigers in Parliament to keep it from becoming public knowledge.

The real nub of participatory democracy, however, was to be the idea of government by consensus. Canadians were to be given a say in legislation before it was passed, or even introduced.

The idea was to introduce white papers on various topics to spark public discussion and sound out the national point of view before the legislation was drafted. They subsequently became green papers, orange papers and red papers, but the result was generally the same — a flurry of discussion followed by legislation which may or may not bear any relationship to the public views expressed.

★ ★ ★

The first was a White Paper on taxation which discussed the pros and cons of Kenneth Carter's views on reform of the income tax. After everyone had given the government the benefit of their ideas, the finance minister of the day ignored Carter's simplifying theory that "a-buck-is-a-buck-is-a-buck" and came up with a thousand pages of tax law that has given the chartered accountant business the biggest shot in the arm in years.

Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier's Green paper on broadcasting is still going the rounds with the debate taking place mostly on a federal-provincial ministerial level.

Former Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien brought out a Red Paper on the Indian Act which, in effect, told the Indians to write their own act. They are having no more success in reaching a consensus than would any other group of people spread across this vast country, speaking different languages and enjoying divergent living standards.

Health Minister Marc Lalonde's Orange Paper on social welfare was hailed by almost everyone as the greatest advance in that field in generations. But apart from a few pension amendments, it hasn't resulted in any major legislative changes yet.

The latest Green Paper to stir public debate was on immigration policy. Immigration Minister Robert Andras even set up a committee of inquiry to travel across the country sounding out public opinion.

Grassroots participation in the democratic process? Apparently not. For just as the committee is getting into the swing of its work, State Secretary Hugh Faulkner moves second reading of a bill that makes major changes in Canadian citizenship regulations.

★ ★ ★

It is true that there are a lot of aspects of immigration policy that do not improve on citizenship, but there are also a lot that do. Knowing what is involved in being a citizen affects what kind of immigration policy the country needs. For instance, Mr. Andras' immigration paper proposes reducing the requirement from five to three years before an immigrant can apply for citizenship.

Mr. Faulkner's bill makes the three-year requirement law.

Maybe the most charitable explanation of this latest affront to the intelligence of the electorate is that Mr. Faulkner doesn't know what his cabinet colleague Mr. Andras is doing.

President Andrew Johnson of the United States proclaimed the Alaska Purchase treaty 108 years ago today — in 1867. Alaska was discovered by Russian explorer Vitus Bering in 1741 but after the Crimean War Russia decided the territory was too vulnerable to hold and in 1857 she began to hint at selling it to the United States. The treaty was finally completed March 30, 1867, the agreed purchase price being $7,200,000. After it was accepted by the Senate April 9, Johnson proclaimed it binding June 20.

1942 — Estevan Point on Vancouver Island was shelled by a Japanese submarine.

1949 — A typhoon and accompanying flood in southern Japan claimed 106 lives.

1959 — A storm in Northumberland Strait between New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island took the lives of 35 fishermen.

Japan's 'examination hell'

By MARK MURRAY from Tokyo

For two days ultra-cautious professors at a top Tokyo women's university agonized over the dubious sex of an extrance examinee. Although glamorously decked out in fashionable red pantaloons and a gorgeous wig, the candidate had ugly mannish hands and, under the heavy pancake make-up, the suspicion of beard stubble.

When the authorities finally plucked up enough courage for a confrontation, under the wig was a middle-aged high school English-teacher taking the exams on behalf of his 17-year-old daughter.

Behind this bizarre tale is a very real and depressing fact of life for Japanese school children — the battle to get into the "right" school. It is a cut-throat business that can start from kindergarten at the age of three until the weary student claws his way into a top university and hasn't a clue why he's there.

Usually it is called "examination hell" and it has produced a forbidding breed known as kyoiku mama (education mother) a fanatic who will go to any lengths to ensure her children get on to the narrow road to success. The father in drag was simply a rare male version of the phenomenon.

★ ★ ★

In Japan success is measured in terms of where one graduates, not what one has learned there (which tends to have no practical application). The problem lies in the fact that "first class" colleges and universities can be counted on one hand. They are the national (government-supported) establishments, whereas almost 80 per cent of the tertiary education is provided by private colleges which are regarded as inferior, whether in fact they are or not.

Of the 77 national institutions, the best, Tokyo University, gets 10 per cent of the government aid and in turn provides virtually the entire government and business leadership.

The competition to enter this handful of elite schools is obviously fierce, and unless a child is a natural-born genius, regular classroom lessons will be insufficient to cope with the severe entrance examinations.

The child with ambition must go to evening, Saturday and Sunday classes at prep schools (private schools) for further general schooling, and then to private tutors or special schools known as juku to polish up individual subjects.

There is a hefty stack of homework to be tackled until after midnight, with the family terrified to switch on the television or make any noise that could break concentration. Small wonder that the incidence of bad eyesight is abnormally high among Japanese youths as they burn the midnight oil.

The present system now poses a dilemma for Mrs. Yoko Harada, a former parent-teacher association chairman and mother of boys aged 14 and 10. She has always opposed prep schools and private tutors, leaving her sons some freedom to develop their own personalities and enjoy childhood pastimes. But now her eldest boy, Makato, is entering his last year at junior high school, which ends compulsory schooling in Japan. Ninety per cent of children go on to senior high school and around 36 per cent to university or college.

"Now I don't know what to do," says Mrs. Harada. "The examinations are pretty hard for any child, so should I let my boy go to a prep school or juku? Already 80 per cent of his class does so, and almost all will be doing so as examination time nears. Will he be at a disadvantage?

"I have always been against the elitism of Japanese society, but now I realize that my son's life will be settled by the events of the next year or so, and I must go along with elitism if I want him to succeed. For the first time I see the great gap between ideal and reality.

"At elementary schools, teachers emphasize the importance of human education, developing personalities and individual skills and ability. But if the children follow that way of education they will never go beyond the lower ranks."

The main obstacles to reform, says Mrs. Harada, are the mothers, who "are egotistical and always criticizing each other, with only their own children's interests in mind. And, anyway, it's still sort of taboo to criticize the education system. You are regarded as a Red."

Saburo Hashimoto, a senior official of the left-wing Japan Teachers' Union, adds: "What you are talking about here is a radical reform of Japanese society, because right now a diploma from the right school is still the key to acceptance. Apart from prestige, it's a matter of money. Private university tuition fees are ten times higher than the national."

Mitsuo Fujinami, education expert of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, says the government's aim is not to destroy the unique universities — which are still needed — but to improve the other establishments by more financial aid and better training of teachers.

He also believes it is necessary to adopt a uniform entrance exam for all national universities and have a system that gives all, rich or poor, an equal opportunity to develop their native intelligence.

Education Minister Michio Nagai is urging business leaders to co-operate in his plan to create a society that does not attach so much importance to academic background. He wants to see a merit system, not the "right" school diploma, govern company entrance and promotion opportunities.

Transit

From The Ottawa Journal

For those who worry about deficits in the public transit system, Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson provided a bit of perspective in a recent speech:

"In economic terms alone, our passion for the private car has cost us a great deal of money. Each year Canadians spend about $7 billion on car travel in urban areas and another $5 billion overall. In contrast to the $12 billion spent on private cars, less than one-half billion was spent on operating all forms of public transit in Canada. In other words, for every dollar Canadians spend on their cars, they spend only four cents on public transit. In all of Canada there are about eight million private cars but only 8,800 vehicles in the entire public transit fleet."

Global investments ensure vast earnings for tiny Arab nation

Kuwait will be rich after oil is gone

By KNUT ROYCE and JOSEPH TREEN, from Kuwait

The national passion of Kuwait is to worry about the future. At the moment, things are fine: free education, free health services, free telephones, guaranteed employment, virtually free housing, no taxes, and billions of dollars left over.

Yet for five weeks this spring, a rather depressing play ran to packed houses. It dealt with a Kuwaiti company that had invested all its funds in oil, shrimp and fertilizer — the country's most profitable commodities, particularly the oil. One day the world economic order collapses, and the company's shareholders are left with nothing. Moral: If you don't plan ahead you court disaster.

"The Kuwaitis worry about this," a western diplomat explained. "It's the one thing that hovers over them. The day the oil will be gone, what will they do? . . . the gnawing doubt is that they'll be left with a ghost town."

So for the past 20 years — long before oil prices quadrupled last year — Kuwait has quietly been investing its surplus revenues in a variety of real estate, bank and security protfolios around the world. Already this small Arab nation is earning more from its investments alone than the entire national budget of Jordan, which has three times Kuwait's population of 900,000.

That's a boast even Kuwait will make. Khaled Abu Saud, the country's director of investments, said that Kuwait had earned $420 million, "or even more" from its investments last year. He added: "In Jordan, the total budget is $360 million."

★ ★ ★

Impressive as that figure may be, it is still an understatement, according to foreign financial observers. Saud says that Kuwait's investments total about $3.5 billion. Yet one Beirut banker who has extensive dealings in Kuwait said the figures that Kuwait announces "are so small that many who know better laugh. But they have a reason for this: The larger it grows, the more pressure for handouts there is from the neighboring sister states."

One western official here who tries to monitor the country's investments estimated that by this spring they totalled about $10 billion. "We can anticipate that by 1980 Kuwait will have foreign assets of between $25 and $30 billion," he said. "And based on current projections, they will have an estimated $3 billion investment income."

In five years, then, Kuwait may be earning from its foreign investments roughly the same amount as its current national budget of approximately $3 billion. And, of course, it will still have its oil revenues, which are currently running at about $7.5 billion a year.

Tremendous wealth, a relatively small population and a enlightened constitutional monarchy have combined to make Kuwait a model social welfare state. This year's public health budget — $100 million — is almost as high as the military budget. About 50 per cent more is spent on education than on the military.

But Kuwait is a flawed Shangri-la. Many of the benefits are for native-son Kuwaitis only, and they are a 45 per cent minority. Each Kuwaiti is guaranteed a job and a minimum annual income of about $8,500. Non-Kuwaiti immigrants — Palestinians, Pakistani, Iranians, Iraqis, Egyptians, Indians — often earn no more than $2,500.

Only native-born Kuwaitis qualify for subsidized housing, for which they pay as little as 10 per cent of its true value.

Only they can own more than the land to build a house on It is for them, for example, that the government built Rikka, a modern city of 5,000 duplex units — each worth about $13,000 — in the middle of the desert some 25 miles south of the city of Kuwait. The price for each unit is about $1,500, with payments spread over 10 years.

They were completed about two years ago, but are still unoccupied because no one had planned for water and electricity, which are now being introduced. Less elaborate settlements are available for Kuwait's desert nomads, who still make up an estimated 25 per cent of the population.

★ ★ ★

Much of the foreign community lives in a drab section of the city of Kuwait called Salmyen by Kuwaitis and "the Slave Quarters" by its residents. Mohammed Mughrahy, a Beirut attorney who visits here frequently, calls Kuwait "an Athenian city-state," complete with "the masters (Kuwaitis) and the slaves (non-Kuwaitis)."

Only a handful of foreign-born residents are granted citizenship each year. The foreigners — many of whom have lived here 20 years and more without qualifying for citizenship — are understandably bitter. But they don't complain too loud: They are better off here than where they came from, and they don't want to be thrown out.

The immigrants form the backbone of Kuwait's work force. Of the 1,732 employees of the Kuwaiti National Industries Co., for example, only .33 are Kuwaiti. In the Shuhaiba industrial sector an hour's drive south of Kuwait City, Kuwaitis number only 420 of the 3,678 employed.

The largest single employer of Kuwaitis is the government. And while there are many who work hard and long hours, there are many others who put in a brief appearance and then leave for the desert.

For the Kuwaiti has strong ties to the desert. On Thursday afternoons, when their weekend begins, thousands of them flock there, where their traditional tents have been pitched and their families are already waiting.

★ ★ ★

Given the country's wealth and its oil reserves, which are expected to last another 50 years, there are many who see a bright future for Kuwait. "Looking into the crystal ball," said Fwad Abu Zayyed, a leading Kuwaiti attorney, "I see Kuwait as a financial and service centre for a very big area. The technocrats will play a very big role, and it will be a financial centre like Wall Street."

But meanwhile, the Kuwaitis worry.

Multinationals face control by governments

By KEVIN DOYLE, from Washington

A recent, little-noticed vote in a committee of the House of Representatives here may herald the strengthening of a disturbing trend in the efforts of western governments to control the actions of huge multinational companies.

The vote came on an amendment proposed to an energy bill which the committee was preparing and it called for all automobiles imported into the United States to be manufactured in significant part within the U.S.

The amendment was aimed specifically at car imports from Western Europe and Scandinavia and was defeated 27 to 8 in the committee.

★ ★ ★

Looked at by itself the measure had little significance.

But a number of trade experts here see it as indicative of a rapidly growing trend in the U.S. and other home-countries of the leading multinationals to expert more muscle in recapturing what they see as lost economic advantages from the operation of the firms in foreign countries.

The result, they say, might be a severe straining in relations among governments involved.

Frederick Bergsten, senior fellow in foreign policy studies at the Brookings Institution, recently told a seminar on Canadian-American relation here this may become one of the most serious issues of international investment during the next five years.

★ ★ ★

"The House committee vote was defeated this time," he said, "but the same kind of thing is almost certain to happen again with growing force and growing dangers for interstate relations."

Bergsten and other knowledgeable observers believe what is happening is that public pressure is growing on governments in the home countries of the multinationals to take reprisals against states which nationalize subsidiaries of the firms or force them to shift production away from their national bases.

★ ★ ★

"A classic example of how such a shift takes place occurred in Brazil in the 1950s," Bergsten said. "The Brazilian government of the time suddenly insisted that American cars being sold in that country be partially produced there.

"This meant a consequent loss of jobs and investment in the United States which might have been acceptable then but is no longer so."

Bergsten and others here believe the long-term operation of the screening of foreign takeover bids by he Foreign Investment Review Agency in Canada and similar bodies elsewhere may gradually make this new trend more evident.

★ ★ ★

"If each time the Canadian government permits a takeover and says this will create more jobs, investment and exports for Canada, aren't the unions going to say: Well, that probably means jobs and exports are being exported, in effect, by the United States and we're not going to stand for this any longer," Bergsten said.

The spread of multinationals has been at least partially due to the existence of high tariffs which make it essential to locate within foreign markets to compete effectively rather than trying to sell over the tax walls.

★ ★ ★

"There is little evidence of tariffs disappearing," said Bergsten, "and it may be that before long the multinationals themselves, which have always resisted international control, may become the strongest proponents of some form of worldwide agreement on their mode of operations simply to prevent their foreign activities being curtailed by pressures at home."

BACKGROUND

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

In your opinion...

Pensioner's tax increase a 'frightful injustice'

I am an old age pensioner (a woman) with an annual income of substantially less than $3,000. (As I am about $7 a year over the maximum allowed, I don't get "Mincome." The "People's Government" of B.C. doesn't do anything for me, and thousands like me!)

The total increase for the year 1975 on my pension-income is about $23. Yet the taxes on my home have increased by almost $60, some of it to pay education costs, and some to pay for CUPE increased wages which, in many cases, amount to about $1,000 a year!

How much longer is this frightful injustice going to continue!

The trade union leaders state publicly they support higher old age pensions. But these union leaders know, as everyone else knows, that the only way this can come about it by increasing income tax, resulting in smaller pay cheques.

So we pensioners do not pay much attention to that sort of hypocritical crap—which costs these labor leaders nothing!

If another CUPE strike comes about, I hope it will last six months or a year, unless the majority of workers who want to sign contracts without strikes, have the guts to defy their leaders.

Fluoride debate continues

Once again I see that the anti-fluoridation banner has been raised in your columns.

Fundamentalists are always difficult to argue with in a logical fashion. Let's see if we could agree about one thing. Your correspondent states that fluoridation is banned in Europe except in Britain. Can we agree that Erie is part of Europe? As legislation now stands the water supplies of Eire are fluoridated to prevent dental decay.

The frequent expression of 'fringe' medical sentiments in the Victoria press sometimes makes me wonder whether or not we should rename Victoria, Quackpatchville!

Paprika and ICBC goulash

Insurance, by definition, is a device for indemnifying an individual against loss. The amount of premium is determined by the law of averages as calculated by actuaries (statisticians who calculate probabilities to determine premium rates).

These are the basic tenets by which all insurers throughout the world function (even non-profit Mutual companies). Except of course in B.C. where we have a tight little monopoly in the automobile insurance field, with a premium structure set by the cabinet using divine guidance, Mao's little red book, or just plain political flummery.

Pragmatic socialist doctrine has emasculated the decision-making powers of the ICBC executive. For example, no actuary would ever consider equalizing the rates for all sections of the province. This is a political ploy and can be justified in no other way.

Premier Barrett, in his 1975 budget speech said, "Autoplan completed its first year of operation with a record of commendable achievement . . . with rates among the lowest in North America."

A $36.4 million first year deficit on projected premium income of $200 million would be enough to send any corporate executive out the penthouse window but in the Disneyworld of socialism it's a "commendable achievement."

To add the paprika to this government goulash, the 1,800 strong bureaucratic army mobilized to carry the ICBC banner to glory, have put their pickets where their pens were.

Many intriguing things may happen to you if you have an accident during this strike. For instance, body shops will only repair your vehicle on a cash basis with some charging as high as $22 per hour for labor.

No contract for such rates exists between the body shops and ICBC, therefore reimbursement from the government may prove to be a perilous procedure.

The latest threat by the union, to picket the independent agents, may well put the whole fiasco in mothballs.

Getting back to the $36.4 million deficit and where the money will come from, I offer this excerpt from Premier Barrett's 1975 budget speech:

"Legislation approved by this legislature last year provides that the Corporation will have access to the Consolidated Revenue Fund of the Province in order to assist in its operations."

Even the tooth fairy couldn't do better than that.

I can hardly wait for the premier's new banking extravaganza, and the new copper smelter to smelt the ore from the non-existent mines, to sell on the non-existent foreign market, through the strikebound B.C. ports.

A shibboleth for your wall, Mr. Premier:

"Don't start any more vast projects based on half-vast ideas."

Capital punishment ideas

In reply to Constable Frazer MacDonald's request for ideas from the public at large to convince our elected representatives that the reintroduction of capital punishment is the wish of the majority, these are mine:

- Through the Federation of Police Officers nationally, a campaign now, and up to the next election, against those members seeking election who are opposed to capital punishment. A commitment by others to support capital punishment.
- Solicit a $1 assessment, through your federation from every police constable across the country. Solicit a $1 donation from any citizen that supports your goal, not forgetting all unionized organizations nationally. The possibility of a fund in excess of $2 million is by no means a stretch of the imagination.
- A reputable audit of all monies collected. Any balance after the goal is achieved to be distributed to survivors of those killed through violence, and who are in need.

My closing comments are that I am against hanging, it's barbaric and out of date. I do favor gas, electric chair, or any humane medical means. I would also want the same justice to all, be he a policeman or my neighbor, the loss would be equally great.

Tyrant, yes; students, no

For some years now, a number of bright young Chilean students have been asking for permission to come to Canada, as refugees from a malevolent system of government. Up to now, their requests have been turned down by the Canadian government on the grounds that they must first convince the government that they are responsible citizens (that is, not socialists).

But wait, hold everything, we have now admitted to Canada this Lt.-Gen. Dan Van Quang, the Vietnamese tyrant, who is held responsible for the torture and death of tens of thousands of helpless Vietnamese civilians. He, of course, is a right-winger.

The minister of immigration states that he does not have the authority to deport this character. Such an excuse is nothing but equivocation.

Almost everyone knows the difference between right and wrong. It's just that most people hate to make decisions.

I am questioning why Mr. Andras, knowing Quang's background, gave him permission to enter Canada in the first place. I am also wondering whether the members of our Canadian Forces will be required to salute this murderer.

In any event, the attitude of the Canadian government is quite obvious. The only thing more odious than preaching a double standard is accepting a double standard.

After all, the Chilean students are left-wingers and, as such, are deemed undesirables. We must be very choosy in that we admit only the desirables. (Gen. Quang, et al.)

Church program was 'disgraceful'

We, the undersigned, wish to strongly protest the program "Make a Joyful Noise" which appeared on the CBC on Sunday afternoon, June 8.

We are disgusted to think our leaders of the United Church of Canada would allow such a disgraceful performance to celebrate the 50th anniversary of church union. Most of the time was given up to a noisy rock and roll type of singing and skits which were arranged with the sole idea of entertainment. Not once did the program lead us to feel reverence and gratitude to Almighty God for guiding us through 50 years of worship and spreading the Gospel which is the main purpose of the United Church.

Even our Moderator, Rev. Wilbur Howard, missed a wonderful opportunity to deliver a message of inspiration about the spiritual aspects of the church. The topics he mentioned are all worthwhile but are secondary to Christ's commission to go into all the world and preach the Gospel.

What the world needs is a leadership which will bring people to God and we are very much afraid the United Church lacks that leadership.

Doctor says:

World beer 'safe'

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The American Medical Association convention has been told that beer is a universally safe substitute for water and other liquids that can cause the travellers' malady, diarrhea.

"In my experience involving some 60 countries, there is no bad beer produced anywhere in the world. The field is too competitive," said Dr. B. H. Kean of the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Centre.

"Beer is one of the best things to prevent dehydration because you get salt, too," said Dr. Martin Wofle, the U.S. state department's specialist in tropical medicine.

"Drink it out of the bottle, don't pour it in a glass (which might be dirty)," added Col. James Burke of the Walter Reed Medical Centre. "Beer does another good thing. It keeps your kidneys open."

The experts said well-boiled tea and bottled water and carbonated soda water are also safe in most countries, but gave their warmest endorsement to beer.

The experts recommended precautions including:

- Avoid all fruit that can't be peeled.
- Avoid salads and fresh vegetables.
- Eat meat only when it is well-cooked.

"Fill up with our non-leaded Shell Ultra. It'll pay off this summer and next!"

NOW, as the peak summer driving period begins, is a good time to start using non-leaded Shell Ultra in your car.

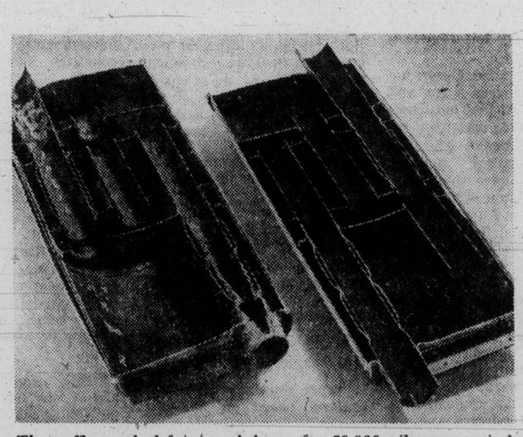
If your car is equipped with a catalytic converter, you must use non-leaded gasoline. But even if you don't have to use non-leaded gasoline in your car—maybe you should.

Shell Ultra, Canada's first non-leaded gasoline, has been the subject of extensive research at Shell's Research Centre in Oakville, Ontario. It has been used by Shell customers in Canada for over six years. It's available at most Shell stations in Metropolitan areas across Canada.

Here are some of the things we have learned about this gasoline—and why many Canadians are switching to non-leaded Shell Ultra.

Longer spark plug life. Normally you could expect a set of spark plugs to last about 12,000 miles. Time and time again in Shell research tests where cars have run exclusively on non-leaded Shell Ultra, the spark plugs have been in good condition after 25,000 miles and more.

Longer muffler life. Not just your muffler, but your entire exhaust system will be exposed to fewer corrosive gases if you use Shell Ultra regularly. Our tests have shown you can reasonably expect your exhaust system to last twice as long as it would if you use leaded gasolines.



The muffler on the left is in sad shape after 50,000 miles on a taxicab using ordinary leaded gasoline. The muffler on the right went the same distance on non-leaded Shell Ultra and is still in solid condition.

Cleaner engine parts. Even though it's not likely you'll ever actually see the difference, it's nice to know that the inside of your engine—things like pistons, rings and valves—will stay remarkably clean on non-leaded Shell Ultra.

Try a tankful of Shell Ultra before you head out on the highway this weekend. Use it consistently and you'll reap the benefits for as long as you own your car. Look for the bright blue pump at Shell stations wherever you drive in Canada.

When you fill up, ask your Shell dealer for your free copy of our informative folder on ways you can improve your gasoline mileage. Tips from the experts on how to get more for your motoring dollar—and ways your Shell dealer can help.

When you drive for good mileage, you do more than save money. You help conserve Canada's energy too.

Make mileage your business

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market recorded its best advance in more than two weeks in active trading Thursday. The western oil index had a fifth sharp gain to close at its highest level in more than a year.

Western oils rose 2.69 to 194.59, highest since June 13, 1974, when the index was 195.15. The index has gained almost 12 points in five days, largely in anticipation of oil price increases and hopes for measures in next Monday's federal budget to encourage exploration, analysts said.

Budd Automotive was off 90 cents to $4.60. Trading was halted for 2½ hours Wednesday pending news that Budd will not supply standard size auto frames for General Motors after the 1976 model year. Budd common did not trade Wednesday.

Woodward A was off ⅝ to $20½. The company reported lower first-quarter earnings.

Forties flip

Not what it appears, British Petroleum's oil platform, Graythorpe 2, tilts in scheduled dive to corrected position. The 52,000-ton rig will be used to recover oil from the British Forties oil field, one of the richest in the North Sea. Field is located near coast of Scotland.

Fuel hikes 'incredible' in Ontario's opinion

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis of Ontario has sent messages to Prime Minister Trudeau and the provincial premiers saying that any increase in the price of oil and gas would be "incredible" at this time.

Davis told the Ontario legislature Thursday that he talked by telephone with Trudeau Wednesday afternoon and was told by the prime minister that the cabinet has not yet made a decision on a price increase, "although he anticipates that some kind of decision will be made in the next few days."

In his conversation with Trudeau, Davis said he "made it absolutely clear that Ontario opposes any increase in the prices of crude oil or natural gas until such time as inflation is brought under control and unemployment is substantially reduced."

Davis said the prime minister assured him that he understands Ontario's arguments.

The premier concluded that the federal budget to be brought down Monday, "will be designed to counteract inflation and expand employment. In the current economic circumstances, increases in oil or natural gas prices would be wrong."

BCFP buys mill

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ian Barclay, president of British Columbia Forest Products Ltd., announced Thursday that the ocmpnay has agreed to acquire the assets of Hampton Lumber Mills Ltd. at Boston Bar, from Willamina Lumber Co. of Oregon.

The purchase includes the Hamptin sawmiill located at Boston Bar, 135 miles northeast of Vancouver.

Ken Benson, senior executive vice-president for BCFP, said in a news release the sawmill has a present capacity for 60 million board feet of lumber and 45,000 units of chips a year.

It was reconstructed from 1971 to 1973 following a 1970 fire which partially destroyed the mill, Benson said.

Operations at the mill ceased in October of last year due to depressed lumber markets and logging was also suspended, he said.

PWA employees buy own trucking line

EDMONTON (CP) — Employees of Pacific Western Airline's (PWA) trucking division have invested $500 to $5,000 each to buy the operation from the airline.

Airline executives were scheduled to formally turn the truck line over to employees Thursday, although the agreement was made last month.

PWA, acquired by the Alberta government last year, was reported to have been looking for a buyer for its $3 million worth of trucking assets when it was proposed that its employees buy the company. Cost was not announced.

B.C. Petroleum refutes claim

Less bunker product planned

VANCOUVER (CP) — George Lechner, general manager of crown-owned British Columbia Petroleum Corporation, said Wednesday the corporation has modified its proposed $350 million refinery to reduce by half the amount of bunker fuel produced.

As originally outlined, the refinery would have produced 40 per cent of its output in the form of bunker fuel. The petroleum industry average is between 12 and 15 per cent bunker fuel.

Cliff Goddard, B.C. corporate manager with Imperial Oil Ltd., had said Tuesday the heavy emphasis on bunker fuel could only lead to hefty losses by the government refinery.

He said bunker oil, used mainly in B.C. in pulp and cement plants and in ships, is a glut on the market now and can be bought at prices lower than that of Alberta crude oil landed in the Vancouver area for refining.

Lechner said that criticism was based on old information.

British Columbia Petroleum decided two weeks ago to change the design of its plant to reduce the volume of bunker fuel by half, Lechner said.

He also said the corporation is flexible and can react to any changes in its market forecasts.

Refinery for Island not in plan—Mohawk

An executive of Mohawk Oil Co. Thursday denied published reports that his company is considering Vancouver Island as a potential site for its 20,000-barrels-a-day of product oil refinery.

Fred Ginell, Mohawk executive vice-president, said that his remarks made to reporters Wednesday "were taken out of context" and that his company is not considering the idea.

Gingell had been interviewed after the Central Fraser Valley Regional District had rejected an application from Abbotsford to rezone 80 acres of Sumas Mountain for a refinery.

Gingell said that his remarks to reporters were that the refinery would have to be somewhere near its major market area — "the lower Mainland and Vancouver Island," not that the refinery would be considered on the Island.

"The economics of the thing make such an idea pretty well impossible," Gingell said. "We would have to bring crude oil across the Georgia Strait."

Gingell said the Mohawk would still prefer to have a refinery located on the lower Mainland.

"Sumas Mountain was not the only suitable site," he added.

Mohawk is a private company owned by 11 Canadians and is one of the largest retail marketers in Canada. It has about 170 outlets in the western provinces and since 1965 has been involved in oil and gas exploration and production.

And pay too much

Canadians buy wrong foods

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — An average Canadian family of four could spend a third less each year on food and still be well fed, the head of the federal Food Prices Review Board sais Thursday.

Beryl Plumptre told the Canadian Dietetic Association studies by the board have found the average family spends $2,900 annually on food, much of which lacks nutritional value.

She said large numbers of Canadians know little about nutrition. Food was merely something to eat.

"The chief reasons Canadians spend too much on food is that they eat too much of some foods and not enough of others."

As examples, she said 40 per cent of the average family's food budget is spent on meat or meat alternatives such as fish. A better percentage would be 25 per cent.

"The most serious cause of the costly imbalance in our national diet is due to the fact that the average Canadian has a much higher proportion of meat than necessary. In contrast, Canadians are spending too little on fruits and vegetables."

Fewer than 20 cents in each food dollar went to the latter.

Another area of waste was the average annual consumption by each Canadian of between 100 and 110 pounds of sugar. Federal nutritionists say 60 pounds is an acceptable total.

She said the culmulative effect of indiscrimiffate fodd purchases is staggering. Canadian tax-payers spent $7 billion each year on health care, of which $1 billion was related to nutritional problems.

Mrs. Plumptre noted, however, that the cost of a nutritious diet for a family of four was 52 per cent higher than five years ago.

'Gut talks' may avert rail strike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The president of the Railway Clerks Union said Thursday only "gut bargaining" on money issues — and not mere White House coaxing — can avert a nationwide rail strike Monday.

Federal mediators led by W. J. Usery, President Ford's top labor troubleshooter, brought the two sides back to view Board said Thursday.

But C. L. Dennis, president of the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks, said his union had not budged from its tough stance.

Instant village may nestle at mouth of Tod Inlet

A quiet 200-acre woodland at the mouth of Salmon-rich Tod Inlet — near Butchart Gardens in Central Saanich — may become the bustling hub of an instant village by the mid-1980s.

The British American Cement Manufacturers' Development Corp. (BACM) has told Central Saanich council and the Saanich school board that Tod Inlet is the site it has selected for development of an 850-to-900-home village, complete with a 150-berth marina and other commercial and recreational facilities.

BACM is a subsidiary of the Winnipeg-based company, Genstar, and officials of the company have told council their proposal also calls for dyking Tod Inlet across its upper end, from a point about 500 feet west of the mouth of Tod Creek.

The Saanich Peninsula municipal council first met, informally, with BACM officials in March.

School board staff met with company officers last week to discuss provision of schools to service the proposed development, which could accommodate between 2,700 and 3,000 residents.

The residents would live in single-family homes, condominiums and other multiple-family structures.

The site chosen for the development proposal lies just east of Butchart Gardens, extending south to the Saanich municipal line.

The authors of the plan — now in the hands of the Vancouver planning firm preparing a 20-year community plan for Central Saanich — have anticipated objections to the proposed development.

"Concerns may ... arise over dyking of the upper end of the inlet, but such objections could be allayed through the provision of a public park fronting Tod Creek ...", a booklet describing the proposal says.

But, the booklet continues, "one has to be concerned about the over-utilization of Tod Inlet as a public recreational resource — BACM considers that intensive general public usage should not be encouraged."

The developers, the booklet says, are considering the environmental impact of the project by planning for park areas and by preserving some of the steeper land in its natural state.

They are also counting on a public outcry.

The development would be "shaped by social and political pressures," the booklet says, describing the pressures as "powerful and vocal forces intent on maintaining the status quo (and which) are antagonistic to urban growth and to the alienation of a land possessing even a vestige of natural amenity."

Sailpast

One of those days that attracts visitors to Victoria — clear sky, sunshine, Olympic Mountains looming across the strait, and just enough breeze to fill the sails of a Fireball — drew Victorians Ken Inkman and Roger Hind to waters off Oak Bay Marina Thursday.

'Yes' vote by CUPE in Saanich

Members of the Saanich local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees voted 141-109 in favor of accepting a contract with that municipality at a meeting Thursday night, their business agent said.

"The contract is not a good one," Tom Smith told the Colonist, "and that was reflected at the meeting.

"The members are not happy with the package, or some parts of it, but it had to be put to them as a package ... and they accepted it as such."

The biggest single objection to the two-year contract, the union business agent said, was a controversial clause which requires the union to drop internal disciplinary charges against any member who was the subject of a complaint during the long lockout earlier this year.

"There's a lot of ill feeling" over the clause, Smith said, but he would not specify what charges had been pending against a union member.

"Many of the members feel management is interfering with the union's business as a result of it."

That ill-feeling is bound to carry over to the job, he added, and may create unpleasant working conditions in some sectors.

The 375 members of the local — inside and outside workers for the area's largest municipality — accepted a contract package which is similar, in most respects, to those which gave workers in Victoria, Oak Bay, the Capital Region District and the Greater Victoria school district raises of between 26 and 34.5 per cent.

There are some minor differences, Smith said, including one which saw inside workers at the top of the salary scale in Saanich pare their demands to allow those in the middle of the scale to draw higher wages.

Other differences include the addition of severance pay, job classifications and working conditions.

The contract expires Dec. 31, 1976.

The agreement leaves only one CUPE local in the region still negotiating for a settlement.

Local 333, representing 82 inside and outside workers in Esquimalt, has yet to ratify an agreement with that municipality, Smith said.

The local will have to decide what its next step will be after the provincial Labor Relations Board hands down its decision on the legality of the lockout of the local's members by Esquimalt in February, the business agent added.

That decision is expected sometime next week.

Live-aboards berthed next to off-limit wharf

Ten people living aboard boats at VanIsle Marina in Sidney, next to the federal wharf from which other boat dwellers were evicted this spring, have yet to be told to abandon their moorings.

More than 15 people lived on boats moored at Fishermen's Wharf, a federal dock administered by the town, until they were ordered to leave in early April.

The live-aboards were told they were violating federal regulations which prohibit dumping garbage or wastes into the water, as well as a Sidney bylaw which requires boats with live-aboards to be connected to a sewage disposal system.

VanIsle manager Alan Dickinson said this week the live-aboards at his marina don't have a sewage hookup and probably dump their garbage in the water.

But the marina manger said he considered his live-aboards an asset, not a liability, and denied they are creating pollution by living on their boats.

A single gallon of gasoline dumped into the water would do more environmental damage than the boats, he said.

His claim was supported by Dick Stratton, of Northwest Biological Laboratories, who said his company grows sea urchins, starfish, sea lettuce and other marine life in holding tanks at the marina.

If the water were polluted, Stratton said, the animals in the tanks would have died long ago — and they have been thriving for months.

Dickinson said the live-aboards help curb vandalism and thefts at the marina because they act as unofficial watchmen.

Sidney town clerk Geoff Logan said Thursday the town's boat sewage bylaw was difficult to enforce.

In order to prove people are living aboard a boat, he said, the town would have to hire somebody to spy on the marina day and night for several days.

Logan also said all but one of the live-aboards at Fishermen's Wharf have left.

That one has decided to fight the eviction order in court.

Thousands ride on Marguerite

The Princess Marguerite carried 16,207 passengers between Seattle and Victoria between June 2 and June 16, Resources Minister Robert Williams told the Legislature Thursday.

In her first week on the Victoria-Port Angeles run she carried 3,537 between the two cities for a total passenger load of 19,744.

Williams said the Marguerite meant an extra $5 million to downtown Victoria merchants who would not have survived this summer without the tourist trade generated by the ferry service revived by the government after being abandoned by Canadian Pacific.

Knife victim 'fair'

A 17-year-old Victoria hotel busboy was reported in fair condition Thursday afternoon and a 19-year-old resident of a B.C. mainland community was charged in Victoria Provincial Court following a stabbing incident early in the day.

Victoria police said Frank Ross Ogilvie of 1009 Carberry Gardens, a busboy at the Wilson Inn, 856 Blanshard, was at first reported in critical condition in hospital with a knife wound in his right abdomen but showed improvement later in the day.

Glenn Scott Kelly of Maple Ridge was charged with causing bodily harm with intent to wound Ogilvie by stabbing him with a knife. After a short discussion by prosecutor Nicholas Lang and Legal Aid duty counsel Brock Emberton, Judge Douglas Campbell remanded the case to today for further hearing.

Police said they were called to the Wilson Inn shortly after 2:20 a.m., recovered a pocket knife with a three-inch blade and found a suspect hiding under a car in the Inn parking lot.

The stabbing incident occurred on the parking lot and police gave few details. Other sources said the suspect and one or two other persons had been drinking inside and had either left or gone outside for air. The busboy went outside and an argument began.

In China, all work for betterment of state

And idleness is unheard of today

Imagine physically and mentally handicapped people manufacturing a million flashlight batteries a month.

Imagine schoolchildren improving their manual dexterity by folding cardboard boxes which hold 12 dozen flashlight batteries destined for export markets.

Imagine both activities taking place not for personal gain or satisfaction, but for the betterment of the state.

What you have is just one example of how the People's Republic of China has succeeded in integrating its society by using resources unavailable to Western nations.

The flashlight-manufacturing example was just one of many impressions gathered recently by A. J. Longmore, superintendent of schools for the Greater Victoria school district, during a 20-day tour of China.

Longmore was one of 20 educators from across Canada who went to China to study education methods in that country.

He related some of his findings to the Victoria Rotary Club at a luncheon Thursday in the Empress.

There is no idleness in Chinese society, according to Longmore.

Elementary schools have gardens where food is grown for elderly people.

Students in so-called middle schools, aged 12 to 18, attend classes for eight months a year.

For one month, each student must work in a factory, for another month, he must work in a commune, and the remaining two months he is on holidays.

There are no hard and fast curriculums in China, said Longmore.

Factories and communes are responsible for their own schools systems and medical services when they reach a certain size.

The state gives only guidelines, but local units decide on educational details.

Factory and commune committees decide who goes to university, said Longmore.

After completing middle school, students must work in factories or commune for two years before they may go on to university.

Universities have no failures as a result of the strict selection of candidates, he said.

On matters other than education, Longmore made these observations:

There is no unemployment. Everybody works. Everybody contributes some of his spare time to the state by doing work unrelated to his other duties with no financial remuneration.

Wages range from $25 a month for commune workers to $50 a month for highly-skilled factory workers.

"But people pay no more than a few pennies for rent," said Longmore.

There is no shortage of consumer goods, he said. Color television sets are available at about $130, but programs are all under government control and used for propaganda purposes, he added.

He was particularly impressed by the fact that "every plant in wheat and rice fields was planted and harvested by hand."

Longmore said many Canadians would find it difficult to live in as confined housing space as the Chinese do, but he added there was no housing shortage there.

"We might also find it difficult to share bathroom and kitchen facilities with seven or eight other families, but the Chinese have no problem," he said.

There was no crime, he said. Anyone can leave doors unlocked.

"You could leave money on the street and nobody would take it. It's strange to have someone follow you for five blocks telling you he didn't give you enough change," he said.

No grant, no answers—chamber

The Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce held a gun to the city's finance committee's head Thursday, but the aldermen would only agree to a conditional surrender.

At issue was the chamber's traditional service of answering inquiries from other parts of B.C., Canada and the world.

Since 1960, the chamber has received an annual grant of $2,500 for this service, first from the city, then from the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee.

This year, the intermunicipal committee turned down the request and a delegation from the chamber told city council's finance committee Thursday the chamber either gets the money from the city or it will discontinue the service.

After about half an hour's debate, the aldermen recommended to council that the chamber be given $1,500 by the city.

If any alderman wishes to increase that amount, he may amend the motion at the next council meeting.

Robert McHaffie, past president of the chamber, told the committee that more than 4,000 inquiries are answered by the chamber every year.

Total cost of this service, he said, was $7,500.

The chamber, McHaffie said, doesn't want to apply to the intermunicipal committee for the grant every year.

"We'll ask the city every year to contribute to the service, or we'll drop it," he said.

He circulated a selection of inquiries and replies and the aldermen agreed that they were far-ranging and that it would cost the city a lot more than $2,500 a year to take over the service.

McHaffie said the chamber receives requests from school children who want brochures about the city, there are inquiries about business opportunities, and questions from people who want to move here.

Young scramblers share lead but Palmer shows old form

Bob Baun

MEDINAH, Ill. (AP) — A couple of young players scrambled into command and pro golf's one-time king, Arnold Palmer, put himself in strong position two shots back in Thursday's first round of the U.S. Open's diamond jubilee tournament.

Pat Fitzsimons, 24, propelled by his first competitive hole in one, and Tom Watson, 25, matched erratic 67s—four under par—for the lead in this chase for the most coveted of all golf's titles.

"I got some breaks," said Watson, who blew the 54-hole lead in this tournament a year ago. "I made the shots you have to make to win."

Watson and Fitzsimmons each had a scramble, erratic effort. Palmer's was solid.

Jim Wiechers, a 30-year-old journeyman pro who has yet to win in nine years on the tour, had a 68 and was the only other player in the 150-man field of the world's best to lead the still-dynamic 45-year-old Palmer.

Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, the only Canadian in the competition, had a 76. Tom Nettles, former Canadian Football League player, shot an 80.

"I got charged up," said Palmer, whose two-under-par 69 brought repeated cries of joy from the massive gallery that slipped and slid in happy abandon over the muddy, haystrewn hills of Medinah.

"I'd like to have three more rounds just like it," said Palmer, who scored his last major triumph in 1964 and hasn't won anything on this continent in more than two years.

But while Palmer and the kids handled the tiny greens, the deep, wet, matted rough, and the long, shaggy fairways — they haven't been cut in three days — in their own, distinct fashions, some of the game's top names had their problems on the 7032 yards of rolling, tree-studded hills and valleys that make up Medinah.

Jack Nicklaus, determined to keep alive his grand-slam dream — the unaccomplished one-year sweep of all the world's major titles — had four fives in a row on his way to a 72, one over par.

Lee Trevino also had a 72, and Johnny Miller, the young man who reeled off those record-setting victories in the Arizona desert at the start of the season, double bogeyed his final hole for a 75.

Tom Weiskopf had the same total. His included an encounter with a local rule — "I got a bad ruling," he said—on the par three eighth hole. He eventually made double bogey on the hole and finished at four-over. At one point, he threatened to withdraw, but he changed his mind and remained in the tournament.

Defending champion Hale Irwin had a 74 in the heat that reached 95 degrees with matching humidity. South African Gary Player took a 75.

"That was the slowest, dullest, most aggravating round of golf I've ever played," said Irwin, who was in a threesome with Player.

It took Irwin in excess of five hours to complete 18 holes.

"Gary and I actually laid down in the fairway while we were waiting to hit our shots," Irwin said.

Popular ex-Leaf new Toro coach

TORONTO (CP) — Bobby Baun, star defenceman for 17 seasons in the National Hockey League, has signed a one-year agreement to coach Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association.

The 38-year-old, twice an NHL all-star, will assume his new duties immediately. He succeeds Bob Leduc, who took over from Billy Harris midway in the 1974-75 season.

"I stayed away from hockey for two years for a number of reasons," Baun said. "For one thing, I wanted to expand my farm operations. But, very importantly, I really wanted to get a better perspective of the hockey business."

Eileen Anderson sets repeat try

Eileen Anderson is in the finals against the medalist for the second straight year in th eVictoria and District women's golf championship.

The Royal Colwood member, who lost to Glen Meadow's Dale Shaw last year and was a finalist in 1966, meets Gorge Vale's Dorothy DeGirolamo in today's championship flight final at Glen Meadows.

Mrs. Anderson earned the final berth with a 3 and 2 victory over host course-hopeful Dianne Desnoyer at Glen Meadows Wednesday. Mrs. DeGirolamo, who won the championship in 1966 — the last time it was held at Glen Meadows — erned the other berth with a 2-up victory over clubmate Shirley Naysmith.

In the consolation flight, Royal Colwood's Doreen Brunsdon, who defeated Flo McIntyre of Gorge Vale on the 19th hole, plays Gorge Vale's Jean Smith, who also posted a 19th-hole victory — over Bea Breffitt of Uplands.

Connors ousted

NOTTINGHAM, England (AP) — Wimbledon favorite Jimmy Connors of the United States was beaten in the quarter-finals of a $108,000 international tennis tournament Thursday as two other seeds also fell by the wayside.

Connors was defeated by compatriot Roscoe Tanner, 7-5, 6-3, as players struggled to familiarize themselves with grass courts.

Also out of contention after the quarter-finals were 1974 Canadian Open champion Guillermo Vilas of Argentina and American Arthur Ashe, seeded No. 2 and 3 here.

Vilas seemed troubled by the grass court and he went down, 4-6, 6-2, 7-5, to Australian Phil Dent while Ashe was toppled, 6-3, 6-4, by Australian veteran Tony Roche.

U.S. golfer wins

HOYLAKE, England (CP) — Carol Semple of the United States three-putted on the final green and had to settle for a triple tie for first place in the Newmark women's international golf tournament Thursday.

Miss Semple, 26, shared the top spot with South Africa's Alison Sheard and Dinah Henson of Britain, all with 301 totals. The American, who led throughout the tournament, missed on a 10-foot putt on the final green and had to settle for a 78 in both of Friday's rounds.

Miss Sheard had a 75 and 76 in the final rounds, while her Britishrival had a 76 and 77.

Debbie Savoy of Montreal was the top Canadian with a 311 total after successive scores of 79 in the third and fourth rounds. Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver had rounds of 78 and 82 Friday for 313, while Dale Shaw of Victoria wound up with a 317 total, which included final rounds of 85 and 78.

Girl gains fall in court ruling

DETROIT (UPI) — Before challenging the state wrestling champion, eight-year-old Patricia McNaughton had to whip the National Amateur Athletic Union.

A federal court ruling gave her the first fall against the AAU and Patricia was confident she could do as well on the wrestling mat.

The 45-pound youngster, who has defeated boys her own age in 38 of 46 matches, filed suit to challenge the AAU's ban of female participation in contact sports.

Her attorneys argued Thursday that since the AAU National tournament is scheduled at the fieldhouse of Eastern Michigan University, a public institution, it must observe federal antidiscrimination laws.

U.S. district judge John Feikens agreed.

In a preliminary ruling, Feikens said officials must let Patricia wrestle if they want to hold the tournament at EMU.

Bored by the two-hour court hearing, Patricia predicted victory in the tournament, saying she can beat the defending state champ in her class.

WHA clubs strip dead franchises

TORONTO (CP) — The World Hockey Association picked the bones of two defunct franchises Thursday as its 14 surviving clubs divided up 56 players made available by the collapse of Baltimore Blades and Chicago Cougars.

Ben Hatskin of Winnipeg, the league's chief executive officer, heaved a sigh of relief after presiding over the draft.

All but three or four of the players who belonged to the Blades and Cougars were picked up, relieving the league of responsibility for paying them for the remainder of their current contracts.

Hatskin explained that after three rounds of drafting the remaining players were put up for auction, with the WHA agreeing to pay the difference between the auction and contract figures.

"Our clubs co-operated and they have strengthened themselves for next year," Hatskin said, adding that "it will be a better league."

Denver Spurs, just admitted to the league, was given the first choice in both the draft of Chicago and Baltimore players and the intra-league draft which followed.

The Spurs picked Barry Legge, a 20-year-old Winnipeg-born defenceman, from the Baltimore list and later took another defenceman, Brian Gibbons, from Toronto Toros. Gibbons, six-foot-three and 190 pounds, is a 27-year-old native of St. John's who knocked around the minors for three seasons after finishing his junior hockey career in Hamilton.

Pat Stapleton, who as playing-coach of the Cougars has a contract that specifies he is required to play only in Chicago, was drafted by Indianapolis Racers, the second choice in the first round.

Stapleton was not immediately available for comment on whether he would agree to join the Racers.

Edmonton Oilers took goalie Dave Dryden, older brother of Ken Dryden of Montreal Canadiens, from Chicago and immediately announced he had been signed.

A number of drafted players are still under contract to National Hockey League teams.

Cleveland Crusaders took Gil Perreault, the brilliant Buffalo centre, Minnesota Fighting Saints drafted Ross Lonsberry of Philadelphia Flyers, Quebec Les Nordiques took Don Saleski, another Flyer, and Houston Aeros, the WHA champions, drafted Dave Forbes of Boston Bruins, all from the Baltimore protected list.

The WHA rights to Jim Pappin, now with the California Golden Seals of the NHL, were taken by Cincinnati Stingers who will make their first appearance as a team next season although awarded a franchise several years ago. And the rights to Jim Watson, the Flyers defenceman, were taken by Quebec from the Chicago list.

Also selected were members of the Soviet national team—Boris Mihailov and Vladimir Petrov by Edmonton Oilers and Alexander Gusev by Phoenix Roadrunners. But there is no indication that the teams involved have any real hope of signing the Russians.

Wins stream for Catfish

Jim "Catfish" Hunter is doing what he's supposed to, and doing it very well.

On Thursday, the husky starter retired the first 17 batters and finished with an eight-hitter as the Yankees whipped the Tigers, 9-2, in an American League game at Detroit.

The victory was Hunter's eighth in his last 10 decisions, it boosted his record to 10-6, and it made him the fourth American League pitcher to reach 10 victories.

Vida Blue of Oakland Athletics, Nolan Ryan of California Angels and Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles are the others.

Hunter was helped by the return of outfielder Roy White, who drove in five runs with a home run and single.

But the Yankees, who already have regular outfielders Bobby Bonds and Elliott Maddox out with leg injuries, lost the services of rookie-centre fielder Kerry Dineen, who pulled a hamstring muscle while running the bases in the fifth inning.

The Tigers' first baserunner was Tom Veryzer, who hit a home run with two out in the sixth inning.

In the National League, gary Carter's bases-loaded infield hit scored pitcher Dale Murray with the winning run in the 13th inning to give Montreal Expos a 3-2 win over visiting ew York Mets.

The victory was the Expos eighth in their last nine games.

Murray led off the inning with a base-on-balls, and advanced on a sacrifice bunt. Mike Jorgensen was intentionally walked and Tony Scott singled to load the bases.

Carter hit the ball in the direction of shortstop Mike Phillips, who couldn't come up with it in time to make a play.

NEW WESTMINSTER — Fatigue and Bill Mosdell caught up with the Victoria Shamrocks Thursday night at Shamrocks Thursday night at

Playing their second game in as many nights, Victoria squandered a chance to move into a second-place tie in the Western Lacrosse association by losing 15-9, to the defending-champion New Westminster Salmonbellies. The victory boosted the Salmonbellies into a first place tie with idle Vancouver Burrards.

Bill Mosdell and Wayne Goss scored a pair of shorthanded goals late in the second period to wipe out a 5-4 Shamrock lead, and the Bellies coasted home with seven consecutive goals in the final period.

Victoria's George Grover was lifted after the 14th goal at 10:05, giving way to junior Al Radley, who was subbing for suspended Skip Chapman.

Mosdell finished with four goals, while Wayne Goss and Walt Weaver both had two goals and four assists. Paul Parnell also scored twice, and Dave Matheson, Steve D'Easum, Gord Jung, Rick Kennedy, and Ian Kennedy scored once.

Pete Rushton scored two goals for Victoria. Ranjit Dillon, Bob Turkington, Jeevan Dillon, Charn Dhillon, Tom Sonmer, Jim Browne and Jerry Kustaski all scored once.

The teams were deadlocked at 2-2 after one period, and the Shamrocks trailed 6-7 after two periosds. The Shamrocks were repeatedly stymied by New Westminster goalie Skip Jolly who finished with 35 stops. Grover and Radley combined to block 47.

Shamrocks were again without high-scoring Ron MacNeil, unable to make most games away from home because of work commitments, and had Vern Black in uniform for the first time in four years.

Winds have been blowing for several days and keeping many salmon anglers off the water, but there have been those who have gone fishing . . . and generally they have landed some good catches.

Secretary Island — Beechey Head waters are still producing some big ones and should be for several more weeks. Monday, Ian Mowat got a 40½-pounder off Beechey Head on Strip-Teaser. Tuesday, Bob Rogerson got a 33-pounder, a 30-pounder, a 20-pounder and an 18-pounder off Beechey Head on Strip-Teaser, 40 feet of line, two pounds of weight on a Downrigger. Wednesday, Jessie Seymour got a 31-pounder and a 28-pounder off the trap shack between Becher Bay and Secretary Island and Otto Wiggins got a 38 pounder when the bite came on around noon.

Charlie Fairall had a real thrill while fishing alone off Constance Banks. He hit into a 64-pound halibut which he had to gaff and drag behind the boat before he could claim it as a catch.

Brotchie Ledge has been providing some fair salmon fishing.

Saanichton Spit waters have been fairly good for chinooks from three to 18 pounds, with a morning bite, a mid-afternoon bite and an evening bite. Best chance of success is to use 40 to 50 feet of line, one and one-half pounds of weight and a large Strip-Teaser.

Saanich Inlet continues to give up its best fishing in years. A 36½-pounder and a 25¾-pounder were taken Sunday, and productive spots have been Coles Bay, Henderson Point, Bamberton shoreline, and from the Boulder to McKenzie Bay, with 120 to 150 feet of wire line, planer, Strip-Teasers or large Tomic plugs.

The smaller blues have been taking Tom Mack or Krippled K spoons, green and chrome colors.

Finlayson Arm waters have been giving up limits of good-sized chinooks from the Narrows, Chesterfield Rock and Stone House waters.

Best bet in the Cowichan area has been mooching off Bold Bluff, on the ebb tide just before the change. There have been some nice-sized chinooks taken, but the area has been over-crowded with anglers. There has been spotty success in other areas, including Separation Point, Burial Island, the Narrows, Tent, Thetis and Kuper Islands.

Wind had made Porlier Pass fishing difficult, but the fish are there if you can get out after them.

★ ★ ★

In Northwest Bay-Lantzville waters best bet has been for the bigger boats to scoot across the Gulf to Lasqueti Island where Happy Hookers, green hootchies and yellow flies have been taking bluebacks.

Qualicum Bay-Bowser-Deep Bay reports indicate the blues are moving in in greater numbers, along with shrimp. Obviously the shrimp-colored lures are getting the fish. Some fair chinook fishing has been found near Chrome Island.

Alberni Inlet-Barkley Sound waters are picking up, with chinooks to tyee size being taken in San Mateo, Rainey Bay, Pill Point, Vernon Bay and Holford Bay waters. Coho fishing has started around Satellite Pass, Kirby Point, Effingham Island and Swale Rock.

Killer whales have been working the Comox to Campbell River waters, resulting in some spotty fishing. A Bomber plug has been taking them off Savary Island.

Campbell River anglers have been scooting up to Stewart Island and across to Bute Inlet for the big chinooks.

Spin-casters in Campbell River have been meeting with success on gold Flutterfish. Plug-cut herring, whole herring and plugs have been taking the bigger salmon.

Freshwater fishing continues to hold up and this is about the best time of year, especially in the lakes.

A Spokane Special dry white moth fly and a halfback silver nymph wet fly has been working in Cowichan Lake along with frog Flatfish, Cowichan spinner and worm, and blue-colored Rapala plugs.

In the evenings a Bucky's Special white tandem fly has been taking the browns in Cowichan River, above Skutz Falls.

Rental boats are now available at Cowichan's Cedars Resort.

Warm watrs are slowing down Quamichan and Somenos fishing.

Red flies and red spinners have been taking them in Shawnigan.

A 7.5-pound brown rtout has been taken in Cameron Lake this week, and now is the time to fly fish that lake at midnight at the outlet river. A red and white Flatfish has been a productive lure.

All lakes have been fairly good in the Campbell River area, with the runoff on now. Lake troll and worm, Flat Fish, fly, and bobber and worm have all been taking trout.

A Black gnat and red ant wet flies have been working well in Upper Campbell Lake, and for dry fly fishing try mosquito, irresistable, or a dark nymph with a little tinsel in it.

The White and Golds Rivers are giving up steelhead.

LAST PRACTICE SESSION before departure for England to compete in Royal Henley Regatta was taken Thursday by Brentwood College heavyweight eight. Brentwood College all set for Royal Henley challenge

By CRAIG MEREDITH
Colonist Correspondent

MILL BAY — Brentwood College's rowing crews took their last sweep in Canadian waters here Thursday before heading on a British tour which will be climaxed by the Henley Royal Regatta on the Thames July 12.

The three crews of eight along with a number of spares and coaches left for Vancouver Thursday afternoon and will catch a plane to England, where they will compete in a number of international class events.

Coach Tony Carr said Thursday that his crew is "much better prepared this year than in 1972, when they last competed in the Royal Henley."

Brentwood made it to the finals that year, but lost out to Kent school by four feet in the 2000 metre event.

"We are crating our boat and taking it with us. We have also obtained accommodation right at the event site," Carr said with a note of optimism.

He said that in the 1972 competition his crew had to borrow a boat which he referred to as a "tub," and that it was necessary to spend an hour-and-half travelling to the event daily.

Last weekend, Brentwood rowers won nine events in the B.C. Open championships, and its heavyweight eight became only the second crew to break the six-minute barrier on Burnaby Lake by winning the 2000 metres in five minutes and 59 seconds.

As a result, they received an invitation Wednesday to compete July 22-24 in the trials for the World Youth Championships in Montreal. The invitation to the trial means the federal government will be picking up the tab.

Two other Brentwood crews, the under-16s and lightweight (under 145 pounds) will also be on the British tour.

Besides the Royal Henley, the crews will enter the Nottingham International Regatta, and the "Princess Cup and London Schools Competition, where they will likely meet the Emmanuel School crew, rated the best England has to offer.

Brentwood College, located on the shores of Mill Bay has a student population of just over 300. It began competing seriously in rowing competition in 1971, when training began on a year-round basis.

East vs West

All-star change seems probable

MONTREAL (CP) — George Reed, president of the Canadian Football League Players' Association, and league commissioner Jake Gaudaur agreed Thursday that the time has come to rethink the formula for the league's annual all-star game.

Reed and Gaudaur both expressed disappointment that this year's event, scheduled here next Tuesday between a team of league all-stars and the defending Grey Cup champion Montreal Alouettes, had to be cancelled because of lack of fan support.

The event has been staged by the players' association since 1970 in the home of the defending Grey Cup champions. Proceeds from the game go toward the players' pension fund.

But Reed and Gaudar, both spoke of games pitting all-stars from the Eastern Football Conference against their counterparts from the Western Conference in future years. Reed suggested the site of the annual game be switched annually between Eastern and Western CFL cities.

The players' association began to run the game in 1970, and the first venture was a success with a profit of more than $25,000 and an Ottawa attendance of 24,000. But 1971 was a break-even year when Montreal turned out only 9,000 fans. Fair success followed in Calgary and Hamilton the next two years, but $24,000 was lost in Ottawa last year.

And with fewer than 1000 tickets sold, a big financial loss seemed certain this year if the game hadn't been cancelled.

Seaboard moves up

Paul Morrison drove in three runs Thursday lifting Seaboard Construction to a 6-4 victory over Nanaimo A and B in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's League game at Central Park.

Morrison drove in one run with a single in the third inning and then broke a 4-4 tie with a two-run home run in the fifth inning.

Brian Grexton had preceded Morrison with a leadoff base-on-balls in the fith.

Phil Berry pitched five innings to earn the victory for Seaboard, which moved into a tie for second-place with Ingraham Hotel.

Berry, who was two-for-three at the plate, was relieved by Barry Wilkin, after giving up a leadoff double to Earle Robinson in the sixth inning.

Bob Boudot drove in two runs for Nanaimo, but was injured sliding into second base in the fifth inning and was taken to hospital for treatment of lacerations on his right leg.

In the Heywood Avenue Men's League, Molsons came from behind to upset Webb and Trace, 6-5.

Webb and Trace had taken a four run lead in the first inning and led, 5-3, after four innings. But Molsons scored three runs in the sixth inning and once in the seventh.

Colin Smythe singled to lead off the seventh and scored on a sacrifice by Tom Cronk and single by Bob Steele.

Claimers to run at super-stocks

Claimer drivers will get an opportunity to prove their skills against the super-stocks Saturday at Western Speedway.

The Carling Open super-stock race has been cancelled and instead the Speedway is hosting a combined competition for claimers and super-stocks.

There will be two main events with the fastest timed cars qualifying for 30-lap main event and the remainder for the 20-lap "B" main event.

Several of the claimers have been posting times fast enough to qualify them for the super-stock races and Speedway director Reg Midgley said Thursday that claimer drivers Jim Smith, Rick Carlson, Bill Bartley and Rick Haskell have an excellent chance of making the "A" race.

Gary Kershaw, who has won the last three super-stock main events, won't be competing. He's taking his car to Evergreen Speedway in Washington for a Sunday race.

Because of the cancellation of Saturday's Carling Open, the next Carling Open scheduled for July 15 will be worth double the points and double the prize money.

Saturday's time trials begin at 7 p.m.

Big offer made for title fight

NEW YORK (AP) — A California financier is offering $10 million for a heavyweight title rematch between champion Muhammad Ali and George Foreman, The Associated Press learned Thursday.

Robert R. Hagopian of San Francisco has already paid $200,000 to Foreman and has signed contracts from the ex-champion, who lost his title to Ali in Zaire last October.

He also has deposited $200,000 in Ali's Chicago bank.

"But I can't get Ali's people to sign," Hogopian said.

The problem is that the champion, currently preparing for his July 1 defence against Joe Bugner in Malaysia, works through promoter Don King and Hagopian isn't interested in King's services. "I spent two days in Chicago with Herbert Muhammad (Ali's manager)," Hagopian said. "And when it came down to signing, they said I'd have to talk to King."

So Hagopian came to New York to talk to King, who has promoted Ali's last four fights.

"He wanted $1.5 million up front," said Hagopian. "I'm not about to pay a promoter as much as I pay a fighter."

Hagopian heads a three-man syndicate which is prepared to pay Ali $5.5 million for a defence against Foreman, who would receive $4.5 million.

In order to keep the money available, Hagopian is paying $5,000 a day for letters of credit.

Although Hagopian has no deadline on his offer, he made it clear that the kind of money he is talking about can be kept available for just so long.

Hagopian said he has already had three cities — New Orleans, New York and Los Angeles — expressing interest in staging the fight in the United States.

Daley signed

WINNIPEG (CP) — Goaltender Joe Daley was been signed to a multi-year contract by Winnipeg Jets. The World Hockey Association veteran is the second of the club's original players to sign a multi-year pact, the first being defenceman Larry Hornung.

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Tim Shaw clipped nearly a second off his world record in the men's 400-metre freestyle Thursday night in the United States trials for next month's world swimming championships.

Shaw, 17, had a time of three minutes, 53.95 seconds to better his mark of 3:54.69, set last year at Concord, Calif.

Cheery games report

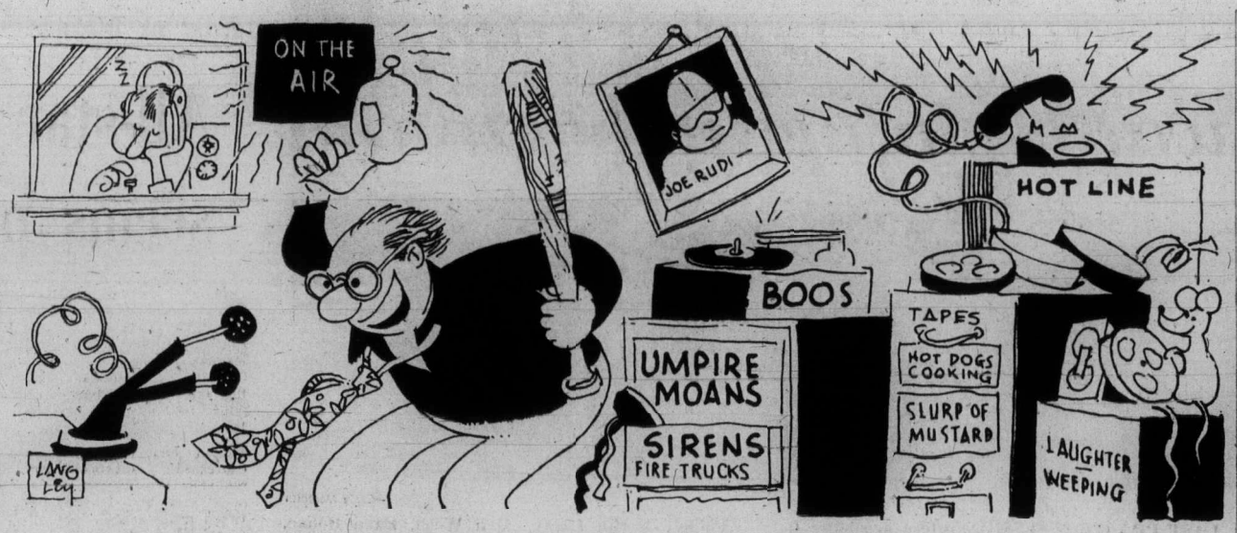
MONTREAL (CP) — Work at the Olympic site can be considered to be on schedule and more workers are being hired following cuts after a two-week strike in May, a spokesman for the Montreal Urban Community said Thursday.

Jacques Delisle said the latest figures he had showed there were more than 1900 workers on the job at the stadium-swimming pool complex and the Velodrome.

"The work force at the sites was cut back to about 1200 workers after the May strike," he said. "Productivity during the last few weeks has been so good I guess I would be safe in saying that we have managed to make up time we lost during the strike."

The Olympic site was closed for 14 days after construction workers walked off the job May 8 to protest provincial government legislation, since passed, placing four construction unions under trusteeship.

All the men were fired and an elaborate screening system was set up when the work stoppage ended to prevent men the contractors considered "trouble-makers" from being rehired.



Old broadcast art not quite extinct lone holdout carries on in Evansville

By ROSS ATKIN
(Christian Science Monitor)

Marv Bates is probably the only man in the country who can broadcast a baseball game locked in a radio station hundreds of miles away from the ballpark — and make it sound like he's there.

Bates stands alone as the master of broadcast reconstruction, a skill he has developed during 12 seasons.

This art was fairly commonplace 30 years ago, but now is virtually extinct. In fact, the voice of Evansville's minor league Triplets (a farm team of the Detroit Tigers) has done some investigating — he called major league baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn among others — and discovered he is the only known sportscaster still reconstructing games.

Marv's first exposure to the craft came in 1949 when he recreated 123 major league games without seeing a single pitch.

In those days the play-by-play was translated out of Morse Code by a Western Union operator and delivered as typewritten copy to the studio. Now, in broadcasting Triplet away games from station WGFB, game action is received over the telephone. Sports writers in the other American Association cities — Tulsa, Oklahoma City, Indianapolis, Des Moines, Wichita, Omaha, and Denver — supply the detailed information. Then it's up to Bates to bring it to life.

This is done using more than 50 sound effects recorded on seven different machines. All are authentic sounds (recorded "on location") which heighten the sense of realism.

"I used to get bored sitting in a dead studio," Bates explains, "so I started adding more and more sound effects to the reconstructions. I've got hot dog and soft drink vendors, the public address announcer paging a doctor, and PA announcements about the 'lucky number for tonight.' "

"Altogether I've spent well over 750 hours in the control room to get the sound effects I have today. One tape, more than an hour long, includes nothing but bat cracks."

One of the most valuable tapes in the audio arsenal is of sustained crowd noise. This is not cheering, but the general hubbub that's heard between pitches. It's what Bates says keeps the broadcast from sounding like it came out of a barrel. What makes this noise hard to record in a pure form are the inevitable interruptions — organ music, public address announcements, etc.

Having heard several reconstructed broadcasts, this reporter can vouch for their realism. Like many others in the listening audience, I once believed they were live, on-the-scene accounts.

The broadcasts are done on a delayed basis. The reconstruction of a game which starts at 7:30 originates from the WGFB studio at 8:15.

Here is Marv's working schedule:

"I call the park at 7:20 to get the starting lineups, names of the umpires, a weather report, the expected crowd size, and the batting averages and RBI totals of the team the Triplets are playing. Later during the broadcast, I adjust the volume on the crowd noise based on the crowd estimate.

At 8 p.m. Bates calls again to get a pitch-by-pitch description of the game's first 30 minutes of action. When he has only a half inning of game action left to broadcast, a station assistant will make another call to get caught up on what has transpired since the 8 p.m. conversation. Even though there is a 45-minute time delay in beginning the broadcast, Bates usually makes up time and finishes the reconstruction only 10 minutes late.

The reason Bates is studio-bound is financial. Its too costly to pick up a minor league sportscaster's tab — room, board, and travel — for the lengthy season.

Lake Hill pairing takes cup

Cec Farles and Francine Landers won the Baker Cup by beating the champions in the final of the women's scotch doubles tournament Thursday at Vic West Lawn Bowling Club.

The Lake Hill pair scored a 20-12 win over 1974 champions Hilda Douglas and Helen Holmberg of the host club.

Bea Gavin and Helda Harper of Victoria Club finished third, while the 1974 "B" champions, Jesse Kinneard and Flora Martin of Burnside were fourth.

This year's "B" winners were Leona Peterson and Ivi McLeod of Burnside. They scored a 19-10 win over Nora Row and Ann McKeaver of Canadian Pacific in the final.

Edmonton named host city for junior B boxla final

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada's first national Junior B lacrosse championship will be held in Edmonton Sept. 4-7, John Tobias of Ottawa, national director of the Canadian Lacrosse Association, said Thursday.

The championship, part of an association program to boost interest in lacrosse across the country, will involve representatives from each province, said Tobias, and will be second only to the Minto Cup Junior A competition in significance.

Tobias said the concentration on lacrosse in the Prairies, where the game has not been popular for several years, is based on the decision of the Commonwealth Games Foundation to stage a demonstration of the sport here in 1978.

In recent years, Canadian lacrosse interest has centred in Ontario and British Columbia. There have been signs of growth in Quebec and Nova Scotia.

Tobias also said 16 teams from across Canada will play in Calgary Aug. 27-31 in midget competition.

The news conference was told Montreal Quebecois of the NLL is considering a series of games in Western Canada next season when the club is forced out of its headquarters for six weeks during the Olympics.

Women's rights champion wants change at beginning

Ruth Bell heads 12,000-member organization

By GRANIA LITWIN
Colonist Reporter

Ruth Bell sounds like a woman warming up for a national campaign to fight sex discrimination.

And why not? (as the International Women's Year slogan goes).

She is president of the Canadian Federation of University Women and her job is to direct and influence the 12,000 members who live in cities stretching from this coast to Bonavista, Nfld.

The federation's national conference is being held at University of Victoria this weekend and Mrs. Bell, along with 121 delegates from across the country, is formulating policy to improve the status of women.

The general goal of the university women's clubs is to safeguard and improve the economic and professional status of Canadian women, and this year's major focus is on sex discrimination.

An example of the descrimination which concerns the clubs is a booklet recently published by a Canadian chartered bank, said Mrs. Bell.

"The book depicted banking careers for both boys and girls. The problem was that all the boys were pictured sitting at boardroom tables and cocktail parties while the girls were seen as tellers or smiling from behind typewriters."

She lashed out at the rampant sexism of the booklet and added the bank was "shamed into withdrawing it."

Mrs. Bell, a professional woman living in Ottawa, acknowledged there was nothing degrading about being a teller or typist — but women, especially young girls, should have the choice to "do something else if they want to," she added.

When it comes to sex discrimination, Mrs. Bell said the federation of clubs advocates change right at the beginning . . . and that means in the Dick and Jane-type readers which help shape the intellects of young minds.

In elementary school readers the "daddy" in the family is always the one who does exciting things and the "mummy" is usually pictured in front of an ironing board, according to the president.

An economist, politicial scientist and former dean at Waterloo University, Mrs. Bell holds degrees from seven different universities in three different countries.

Her varied experience as lecturer at various Canadian universities, admissions secretary in the graduate school of New York University, executive secretary of the Australian vice-chancellor's committee, and president of the Ottawa Women's Canadian Club (to name only a few organizations) has led her to believe that unbiased counselling is fundamental in overcoming sex discrimination.

"Many guidance counsellors, while they give good career advice to boys, neglect their duty to the girls, explaining they are going to get married anyway."

The point is to give young women the same options as men, she concluded.

The Canadian Federation of University Women is a non-governmental organization affiliated with the International Labor Orgaization and the United Nations Economic and Social Council.

The federation meetings and workshops end Sunday.

Airclub International unlikely to give refund

SEATTLE (CP) — About 300 B.C. residents who booked holidays aboard with Airclub International of Portland, Ore., will likely lose their money, a club spokesman said Thursday.

Betty Anderson said in an interview the club, which B.C. Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young is investigating, has closed its Vancouver office.

She said the average loss would be $139 a passenger and said this would include $25 deposits and $300 air fares.

She said club clients in Europe and Hawaii will be brought back by scheduled airline flights.

Epp wants to meet with Barrett

Canadian Press

E. W. Epp, deputy attorney-general for corrections, was ordered to take a leave of absence because the provincial government lost confidence in his ability to manage the corrections branch, deputy attorney-general David Vickers said Thursday.

He said the decision to relieve Epp of his duties was based entirely on a question of management, especially in budget and staff deployment.

Those reasons should have been very clear to Epp, Vickers said.

Epp, who was ordered to take the three-month leave of absence Monday by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald, said Wednesday he had not been given any reason for the order and "was completely in the dark."

The corrections director is being paid during the leave of absence and will return to work for the government in some other capacity at the end of three months.

Vickers said any further comment of Epp's departure would have to come from Macdonald, who is in England this week.

Epp said in an interview he would seek a meeting with Premier Barrett when Barrett returns from England to make sure all the information the premier has on his leave is accurate.

He said he was certain that if the premier understood the problems involved in his case, his dismissal would never have taken place.

He maintained he was never given the reasons for his leave of absence and that Vickers' reasons "cannot be supported in fact."

He said there was a problem because of a small overrun in the 1975-76 budget of the corrections branch but that he was proposing measures too correct this situation

Epp said he wanted to tell the premier how much money he felt the branch needed, how much was unnecessarily spent and what size of staff was required.

After 49 years, Mrs. Stick retires today

Students 'no worse than 49 years ago'

By KING LEE
Colonist Reporter

Edna Stick is one year away from the half-century mark as a school teacher.

She looks perfectly capable of at least reaching that plateau and some of her pupils at Colquitz junior high school want her to stay on as their French teacher.

But Mrs. Stick has reached the mandatory-retirement age of 65 and according to the rules she must retire.

So she will do so today . . . because it is the rule. And she is a self-professed stickler for the rules.

"Strict? I am in a sense," said Mrs. Stick, who began her career in 1926 in her home province of Newfoundland.

"I demand that the work be done and that they (students) adhere to the rules of the school. And I've stressed they be considerate of others."

Claiming to be older than she actually was, Mrs. Stick began at the age of 16 in a one-room classroom in Grate's Cove, teaching 12 grades (primary to Grade 11) to 57 students.

"Yes it was difficult," she admitted. "I would teach two or three in a class, one would get it and teach the others."

Recruited to teach armed forces personnel in the Second World War, Mrs. Stick recalls that the first time she taught "Canadians" was in 1942 and they were military police. At that time Newfoundland had not joined Confederation. During the next few ears, she taught about 1,500 soldiers.

She also ended up marrying her boss, the commanding officer of the Newfoundland Regiment, which was part of the Canadian Forces, although Newfoundland didn't officially become a province of Canada until 1949.

With photographs of her early days as a teacher to back up her memory, Mrs. Stick looked back on her 49 years of teaching and thousands of students.

"I don't find the children any worse now than they were 49 years ago. I love them. They're sweet and they do things we never thought of doing, like collecting for the poor, singing at Mount St. Mary's and things like that.

"Oh, they won't do the extra hours of homework we had to do . . . but we had too much.

"But it's a different society these days. They've learned things like 'That's not in my contract'. We've taught them that.

"I am not the least bit worried about the future of the world with the students I've had.

"I've found that the students are very frank . . . and loyal."

Apart from a general intention to "rest and read," Mrs. Stick plans to cover what she considered three important areas — her brain, her body and her auto.

The reading, she says, will take care of keeping her brain busy. For the other two, she is enrolling in week-long courses at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver titled Know Your Body and Know Your Car.

"I also have my name down to go to China," she said.

If there has been anything Mrs. Stick hasn't been able to do in the last 49 years, it's remembering names. To compensate, she called everyone "dear, darling, sweetheart" or other similar terms.

The affection it represented was obviously somehow transmitted to the students.

One student perhaps said it best for the rest by writing in Mrs. Stick's last school annual, "Bonne chance, aujourd'hui et toujours."

"Good luck, today and always."

Lure inventor offering

Youngsters compete for special prizes

Youngsters entering the King Fisherman Contest are going to get some special prizes after all.

Jim Gilbert, who invented the line of Krippled lures, has offered 37 prizes for anglers 16 and under competing in the Colonist fish fest.

Each month he will give six prizes of four assorted Krippled lures and at the end of the contest there will be a major prize of a rod and reel complete with lures.

The Krippled lure line includes two sizes of the Krippled Herring, Krippled Minnow, Sasher, three sizes of stainless steel dodgers, three sizes of Krippled Octopus in 20 different colors, Super shock absorbers in three sizes, Krippled K spoons in two sizes, and Krippled Needlefish spoons.

First winner will be announced at the weekend.

Six-year-old Dean Cawsey of Sooke proved he was a good angler Wednesday morning.

He wanted to go fishing so his father rigged him up with a cane pole and a $2 reel. When a 16-pounder hit, the pole broke, but young Dean still managed to land his big fish.

Bill Townsend, fishing with Wally Fenske in Coles Bay, had a big thrill. They had already boated a 16.13-pounder when another fish hit.

It gave him the battle of his life and ran out 150 feet of line before he could check it. Finally, he boated it, a 17.13-pounder, to discover it had been hooked by the tail and the hooks had been straightened.

Victoria car fleet cheaper way out?

The city of Victoria is considering the purchase of a car fleet because it might be cheaper than paying car allowances to employees.

The city now pays about $40,000 a year in mileage money to employees using their own automobiles on city business.

The committee tabled a recommendation from city manager James Bramley that council set up a new mileage money structure.

According to Bramley's recommendations, car allowance would be increased to 18 cents a mile for the first 500 miles a month. For mileage greater than the first 500 miles, the allowance would drop to 10 cents a mile.

There would also be a provision for flat fees of $30 and $60 a month for employees using their cars regularly on city business.

At present the city pays 14 cents a mile to union staff and 12 cents to non-union staff.

Arguments still flying on Williams power bill

A modest bill to bring the resources department into the 20th century, or a long goose-step to dictatorial powers for Resources Minister Robert Williams split the Legislature Thursday.

Under debate late in the afternoon was Bill 127, already known as the "Bob Williams Incorporated Bill," which would give the minister sweeping powers to develop as he sees fit Victoria's Inner Harbor and mainland ski resorts.

The bill came under fire at 5:15 p.m. but debate was suspended 45 minutes later until Monday. Williams will be out of the house today on government business in the Cariboo.

Opening the debate, Williams said "this modest bill merely brings the land department into the 20th century."

Having said that, he reached back 15 years to review a Social Credit B.C. Hydro and Electric Power bill which, Williams said, gave the government of the day "awesome powers."

The minister claimed that the press of the day raised no objections when that legislation went through virtually without protest.

Alex Fraser (SC—Cariboo) reminded Williams that the NDP opposition of those days had voted unanimously in support of the bill Williams was referring to.

Williams said the new legislation was designed to protect "the great asset of Victoria's Inner Harbor and we believe a crown corporation the best way to do that."

The legislation permits Williams to form a crown corporation to run the Princess Marguerite and develop former Canadian Pacific property and the old Reid Centre site, both located in the Inner Harbor.

The bill when approved will give Williams the power to purchase land, ships or motor vessels, to undertake the planning, development and management of crown land or to engage in any other business necessary for those purposes.

The corporation or corporations set up by Williams with cabinet approval, but not needing consent of the house, could also borrow $250,000 in start-up funds to an aggregate of $10 million.

Liberal leader David Anderson said he will vote against the bill as it now stands, but would be more sympathetic in the clause-by-clause discussion if Williams brought in some amendments.

He wants to see the bill amended to limit the powers given to Williams.

Hugh Curtis (SC Saanich and The Islands) said the bill goes so far "I think a number of people must still be in shock."

He said he was sorry to see the minister advancing the simplistic argument that if the Opposition votes against the bill it means they are opposed to the development of the Inner Harbor and to the operation of Princess Marguerite.

Plastic bottle coming out for soft drinks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There's a new plastic bottle coming on the market for soft drinks and maybe for beer. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration says it's safe. Some environmentalists question that, and object to its litter potential besides.

Four firms are setting up production of the bottle, made of a material called acrylonitrile. The Monsanto Chemical Co. already is supplying it to Coca-Cola, which has started test marketing it in the Providence, R.I., area and plans to extend its use nationwide.

FDA officials said Thursday that tests by Monsanto indicate there is no danger of chemicals from the bottle "migrating" to the liquid inside, and thus there is no health hazard.

But the Environmental Action Foundation and the Environmental Defence Fund said there is inadequate proof of safety. They also claim that production of the bottles uses more energy than that of glass returnable bottles; that they contribute to air and water pollution in the manufacturing process; they could give off dangerous fumes if burned in a confined area; and that users will scatter them around the countryside.

A problem was encountered with another plastic used for a time to make bottles for alcoholic beverages, polyvinylchloride. The government finally banned those containers because the chemical made its way into the liquor.

An FDA researcher said the Monsanto test results indeed showed such problem. "Their methods are sensitive down to 50 parts per billion, and there was nothing detectible down to that range and that's virtually nothing," he said.

The FDA said it recognizes the potential litter problem, and invited a suit on that score, maintaining it only has power to rule on health and safety considerations.

B.C., not BCR paid Swanson

The B.C. government, not B.C. Railway, made the controversial payments to Railway Appliance Research Ltd., of which B.C. Railway director Robert Swanson is president, Labor Minister William King told the Legislature Thursday.

He said he wanted to correct an erroneous impression he had left during debate on the act that increases BCR's borrowing power by $210 million.

He had indicated during debate that Railway Appliance Research Ltd. had received $10,000 in 1965, and similar references during the debate had inferred that other payments were received by Swanson's company from B.C. Railway.

The payments had in fact been made by the government, said King.

"If payments were received from the railway while he was chief engineer that would be a conflict of interest, but I have no evidence that he received payments of that kind," King said.

Crash help 'tardy'

There was a 20-minute delay in getting an ambulance to a recent fatal accident on Goldstream Avenue because the wrong ambulance was ordered out by the new dispatch service, according to David Anderson (L—Victoria).

He asked Health Minister Dennis Cocke in the Legislature Thursday if he will be investigating the delay. He said the ambulance sent to the scene was from a more distant point than the Langford volunteer ambulance which was standing by at the time.

Scott Wallace (PC—Oak Bay) said there is another problem concerning the Langford ambulance, because the volunteers have to phone the Richmond Road centre before leaving the station, even if Colwood RCMP wants it to go to an accident scene.

"This seems picayune when you are delaying when there is an accident and minutes may count," Wallace added.

Cocke said he would look into the problems, but pointed out there are usually difficulties when any new system is started.

In general, he said, the service has been "tremendously well accepted."

ICBC talks to resume on Tuesday

Talks between the Insurance Corporation of B.C. and its striking employees will start again in Vancouver Tuesday morning, Transport Minister Robert Strachan announced in the Legislature Thursday.

It will mark the first time the two sides have met since the strike started May 20.

Strachan said outside the house that he had told the management negotiating team to get in touch with the union after a directors' meeting last week.

"The directors decided we should phone the union and that is what we did," he said.

Pipeline inspections crusader

Strachan 'smear' charged

A crusader for better pipeline inspection in the province has charged Transport Minister Robert Strachan with falsely smearing his name in the B.C. Legislature.

And Victoria pipeline consultant James Sutherland says the Strachan smear was designed to brush "under the carpet" investigation of alleged defects in the natural gas pipeline crossing the Agassiz-Rosedale bridge.

For more than a year Sutherland has campaigned for full investigation of his charges that two out of four welds selected at random in the pipeline were seriously faulty.

His charges have been denied by West Coast Transmission, owner of the 30-inch high pressure pipeline carrying gas to the Lower Mainland and the border for export to the U.S.

And a National Energy Board investigation concluded that the welds singled out by Sutherland "proved to be well within existing or previous code requirements."

Sutherland, however, does not believe the board has in fact tested the same welds he himself had x-rayed with the help of a Burnaby testing firm.

In the Legislature Wednesday, Strachan claimed Sutherland was fired on two separate occasions by Bechtel (a large international engineering and pipeline company with a Canadian subsidiary).

Sutherland told the Colonist Thursday he has evidence to show he was never fired from Bechtel.

A former pipeline welder, Sutherland joined Bechtel as an inspector in 1961 and was eventually laid off in 1966 after the completion of a tar sands pipeline project in Alberta.

He feared his career could be prejudiced by Strachan's "smear."

Strachan's remarks came in reply to a question about the alleged West Coast Transmission pipeline flaws from NDP backbencher Peter Rolston (Dewdney).

Strachan said his department had learned from West Coast earlier this month that the company had now installed an additional pipe across the Fraser River at Agassiz as part of its regular program.

"After this new section is tested and brought on stream in July, the company proposes to take steps to remove so-called inconsistencies in the two welds in question so as to eliminate any possible future concern."

Sutherland notes, however, that while Alberta has at least 11 government pipeline inspectors, B.C. has none.

He wants mandatory government inspection of pipelines in this province.

Williams-bill authority in Rail Act, says Curtis

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

Hugh Curtis (SC—Saanich and The Islands) said Thursday night he doesn't think Bill 127, the new legislation giving Resources Minister Robert Williams wide powers to develop Victoria's Inner Harbor and operate the Princess Marguerite, is necessary. (Earlier story on Page 17).

"It seems to me that everything he (Williams) needs is already in the Railway Act which has been on the statute books since the turn of the century," Curtis said in an interview outside the house.

The Railway Act states that the crown corporation can "purchase, build, own, charter, use, hold, equip, maintain and operate steamships, sailing-vessels, and other vessels, boats and crafts, and carry on business as carriers of freight and passengers for hire, and own and operate docks and wharves and carry on business as dockmasters and wharfingers."

The Railway Act goes on to say that the crown corporation can also:

"Sell, improve, manage, develop, lease, mortgage," or dispose of any property owned by the company.

Curtis said that apart from any implications which may arise from running a ferry in international waters, the act appeared to give the government all the authority it required to run the Marguerite and develop Inner Harbor land.

"I suppose there is one other big difference," Curtis said. "Under the Railway Act the railway company would run the Marguerite. I don't think Williams wants that. He wants the Marguerite and Victoria's Inner Harbor for himself and his own aggrandisement."

Curtis pointed out that the Railway Act also gives the "company" the right to purchase and develop land.

"If it is just a matter of the government wanting to do the best thing possible for Victoria and the Inner Harbor, then I think the existing statutes carry all the necessary authority," Curtis said.

"If it's a matter of the minister wishing to pull under his own authority even more power than he already has, then I suppose we can understand why he wishes to ignore the existing statutes just to enhance his own power base."

'Boat appeared overloaded'

Lasqueti resident drowns

PARKSVILLE — A 35-year-old Lasqueti Island man drowned either Wednesday or Thursday after his boat apparently overturned on a trip from French Creek to Lasqueti Island.

Parksville RCMP said that the man's body was found Thursday by a fisherman washed ashore on Jenkins Island, northeast of Parksville.

The man's name is being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Police said they have determined that the man left French Creek for his island home Wednesday afternoon with a heavy load of groceries aboard his boat.

"Somebody suggested to him that his boat appeared to be overloaded," a police spokesman said.

The boat was found overturned in Georgia Strait Wednesday afternoon but police did not link it to a drowning since no one had been reported overdue or missing.

"We attempted to find the owner of the boat but we could not," the spokesman said.

children had also been lost at sea since they were last seen with him at the French Creek dock. They were later found to be visiting the Campbell River area.

Damage $5,000 in blaze

Fire which caused damage of between $5,000 and $6,000 to a Victoria rooming house at 1255 Pandora Thursday morning apparently smoldered for three hours before anyone noticed it, Victoria firemen said.

Deputy Chief Carl Coates said the fire began in a ground-floor suite of the two-storey frame building and was due to careless use of smoking materials. He said William Pert, occupant of the suite, left for work at about 8 a.m.

The fire was noticed at about 11 a.m. by another tenant, who was the only person in the building at the time. The unidentified man got into the suite in an attempt to quell the flames with an extinguisher but was forced back by heat and called firemen.

Brief jail stay eliminated

Court adjourned to fix 'detention'

A policy change was the result Thursday in Victoria Provincial Court when Judge Douglas Campbell saw something he didn't like and took the unusual step of adjourning court in mid-morning to fix it.

Campbell, at 30 the youngest provincial court judge in B.C., called two prosecutors, a court clerk and a court officer to his chambers to ask why persons who are not in custody before being put on probation have to be taken to jail after receiving probationary terms.

The answer was that the policy had developed over the years because the persons had to be detained until probation papers could be typed and signed and there was no available place other than the jail next to court.

Campbell changed the place of "detention" to the front bench in court and, by the time the morning was finished, three persons were sitting on it waiting for completion of their papers.

First to appear was Trevor Davies Baird, 17, of 3582 Thistle, who pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of possession of a small amount of marijuana Feb. 21 outside Mt. Douglas school.

Baird said the incident caused school officials to expel him and he had been working since Feb. 23 but planned to go to Camosun College in September to complete his high school credits.

Campbell indicated some dissatisfaction with the fact the school officials acted before the matter had been judged in court. He said Baird had "certainly suffered consequences that are far-ranging" and put him on probation for one month.

James Howard Colley, 20, of 836 Gerrie, was called next but as he came forward, Campbell saw Baird been taken to jail instead of returning to the spectators' section. He asked why, got the policy answer and abruptly adjourned court for the chambers session.

When it ended, Colley pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of possession of a small amount of marijuana Feb. 21 on Saanich Road. He got a similar one month term of probation and was told by the judge to "have a seat on the front bench."

The same instruction was given to Roy Jonathan Sampson, 28, of 2979 Austin, who pleaded guilty Wednesday to a Victoria charge of possession of a small amount of marijuana Sunday.

Sampson won a conditional discharge from Campbell because any conviction which gave him a criminal record might affect future plans for foster parenthood and advancement in a B.C. government career. The sole condition was three months' probation.

Sampson's case was the first of three where discharges were requested by defence lawyers but Campbell, who has stepped up use of discharges since the rotating-judges system brought him to docket court June 1, granted only one.

A discharge was sought for Eva Law, 35, of 975 Bray, who admitted shoplifting three steaks worth $7.63 June 7 at a Colwood store, but Campbell decided on a $25 fine instead. He said a conviction would not be "a serious detriment" to her future.

A similar request was made for Bruce Alexander Watson, 22, of 215 Oswego, who pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of mischief in damaging a backhoe parked early June 12 in downtown Victoria.

Campbell said there was no evidence of "future prejudice," but because Watson had already paid for the damage of $57.67, he levied only a fine of $40.

One problem resulting from his front-bench decision was the question of who was responsible for security of those awaiting probation papers. Discussions were continuing at last report.

Sunnyside splash

It's been pretty warm on Vancouver Island these days but that's nothing compared to Toronto where 17-year-old Nada Martel spent most of the day making waves in Sunnyside public pool on the lakeshore. And no wonder — with the temperature approaching 30 Celsius.

Inquest called in drowning at Kemp Lake

Sooke RCMP were still unable Thursday to complete contact with relatives of a 20-year-old Victoria woman who drowned one week ago tonight in Kemp Lake, but police did identify the driver of the car which sank with her in the lake.

A police spokesman identified the driver as Wayne Lloyd Hansen, 23, of 1890 Maple in Sooke. The official also said the woman's identity may be disclosed today and Sooke coroner Roy Girling will hold an inquest next week.

Hansen and the woman met at a Glen Lake area dance Friday night and were driving to a house party in Sooke on what Hansen thought was Kemp Lake Road, a through road, but was actually Milligan Road, which runs into the lake.

The car stopped about 45 feet from shore. Hansen got out and swam to shore, calling for his companion. When he saw she was not following, he tried a rescue effort but the car sank in 18 feet of water.

His cries for help roused no response in the neighborhood and Hansen eventually entered a vacant home and passed out from shock. He walked home Saturday morning and stayed alone in his home for three days, still suffering from shock, until a friend persuaded him to tell police Tuesday.

Hansen's dog also drowned when the car sank.

Tax count involves $576,815

VANCOUVER (CP) — Berton Keith Baldwin, president of Baldwin Hotels Ltd. of Vancouver, pleaded guilty in provincial court this week to not paing income tax on $576,815.51 he received between Dec. 31, 1965, and May 1, 1969.

Sentencing was set for July 18.

No evidence was given in court and the amount owing the federal government was not disclosed.

Baldwin Hotels operate the Haida Inn in Campbell River, the Kitimat Hotel and the Yellowhead Inn in Prince George.

Provincial COURT

An 18-year-old Sidney girl was ordered Thursday in Victoria Provincial Court to apologize to a Sidney RCMP constable and immediately asked Judge Douglas Campbell: "Does he have to apologize to me?"

Penny Louise Hopkins, 2052 Ardwell, pleaded guilty to a Sidney RCMP charge of causing a disturbance June 5 by using obscene language and prosecutor Nicholas Lang said the language included "off" and "pig" with both preceded by variations of a common obscenity.

Lang said several persons were disturbed by the language, which was directed at Constable G. P. Guiltenane in front of a pizza shop on Beacon. He had stopped Miss Hopkins for a check and she had refused to produce identification.

It seemed a routine case until Campbell asked Miss Hopkins for comment. She said she was "harrassed ... continually harrassed ... pulled over at least twice a day for no reason at all."

Did she know Guiltenane? "Very well," she told the judge.

"When I got down to the police station, I was called names that I shouldn't have been," she added, indicating there was an inference that she might have been a prostitute.

Campbell said that had nothing to do with the charge and "perhaps you should write a letter to the police chief."

He added that "I think under the circumstances you asked for your own trouble," fined her $50 put her on probation for one month and told her to apologize to Guiltenane in the presence of a probation officer.

"Does he have to apologize to me?" Miss Hopkins asked. "I will write that letter."

□

The strike-lockout of Greater Victoria CUPE members had an after-effect in the case of Michael James Rogan, 22, of 1230 Marchant, who pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of possession of a small amount of marijuana Feb. 23.

Campbell asked why it had taken so long for the charge to reach court and prosecutor Michael O'Connor said he believed "a large number of matters were dealt with by summons" during the dispute and the summonses were not delivered until after it ended.

He was right — two similar charges dated Feb. 21 were called soon after. Campbell fined Rogan $50.

□

In the court section of Judge Harold Alder, a six-month prison term was ordered for Warren John William Wright, who pleaded guilty earlier to a Campbell River RCMP charge of being unlawfully at large March 22 from the Snowden forestry detention camp.

Wright, 21, was found four days later by RCMP in a home in the Campbell River area. He must serve the six months before completing a term received for a Victoria area offence.

□

Murray Scott Moran, 22, of 2072 Chaucer, was sentenced by Alder to 30 days in jail to be served on weekends and followed by a one-year term of probation. Moran was found guilty following a trial on a two-count Saanich charge of break-ins Jan. 9 at two service stations, where a total of about $20 in coins was taken.

Gas hike set for Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP) — A spokesman for Northwestern Utilities Ltd. said Thursday Edmonton residents should prepare themselves for a 40-per-cent increase in natural gas rates in July. The spokesman said the increase will arise from changes in the provincial government's natural gas price-shielding policy as well as royalty and income tax changes.

Indians block another road

PEMBERTON (CP) — Indians have blockaded the Mount Currie-Lillooet Road near Pemberton, about 80 miles north of Vancouver, to protest seizure of two fishing nets by federal fisheries officers. The Mount Currie reserve members are stopping white people from using the road, which passes through the reserve.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden notes

The foxglove family has long been a favorite with me. I imagine you know the general habit of the plant — an attractive basal rosette of large, handsome leaves out of which rises a stately three-or four-foot spire of exquisite flowers.

To me, there is something irresistible about the perfect formation of the drooping, finger-shaped florets on the spike, and the manner in which these florets arrange themselves so every blossom can be seen.

★ ★ ★

The coloring is wonderful in its range and shading. In the Shirley strain, for instance, you may have pink, bronze or crimson as the ground color, polka-dotted with spots of contrasting color.

Whites, pinks, creams and yellows are featured in the Gloxinoides strain, so named because each floret on the spike resembles a gloxinia bloom.

The Excelsior strain has florets all round the stem rather than facing only in the one direction.

Foxy, a fairly recent development, is a shorty, standing only about two feet tall and blooming in only five months from seed started early in the spring.

★ ★ ★

A good collection of foxloves can be a decided asset to any garden, for not only do they solve the problem of what to grow under trees where little sunshine penetrates, but a careful grouping can also be one of the real beauty spots in the garden.

Not that foxgloves MUST be grown in the shade; they will perform equally well in a sunny perennial border, as long as the soil is well stocked with manure, leafmold or other moisture-retaining organic matter.

The easiest way to get started with foxgloves is to sow seeds in midsummer. The seeds are very small, but fresh seed germinates quite surely in about a week at normal midsummer temperatures — 20 to 25 degrees — and three weeks later you should have a fine stand of husky young seedlings.

Choose a shaded location for the seed bed and dig it over deeply. If you have any leafmold or ripe compost, incorporate half a bucketful per square yard, for the foxglove is, in nature, a woodland plant with a natural affinity for rotting leaves in its root run.

★ ★ ★

Break up the lumps by banging them with the back of the digging fork, then walk all over the seed bed to firm and consolidate it.

Rake it down to a fine tilth, then scatter your seeds VERY thinly on the surface without any covering at all.

Watering is a bit of a problem, for the soil must not be allowed to dry out or form a crust, yet any splashing with coarse droplets would dislodge the tiny seeds or wash them down to a depth too great for germination.

The old-time gardeners had a solution that has worked well for me; simply cover the seeded bed with wet sacks. If any further watering is needed before the seedlings appear, water right through the sacks.

★ ★ ★

Remove the sacks as soon as the first seedlings appear — better take a daily peek — and if any weeds should pop up, take them out by hand.

When the baby foxgloves have made their fourth true leaf, dig each one out carefully on the point of a narrow trowel and transplant it to a nursery bed, six inches apart, each way.

The depth of planting is somewhat critical, both on the move from the seed bed to the nursery bed, and again in October when you shift your plants to their flowering quarters.

Like the strawberry plant, the growing point must be cleanly above the soil surface, for if it is buried, the plant will perish.

★ ★ ★

Some gardeners set out their plants in three-inch high ridges of soil so there can be no possibility of soil washed in over the crown after planting.

Foxgloves are biennial, blooming and dying in their second year. They seed themselves so freely, though, there is nearly always a nice batch of "volunteers" coming up to take the place of the time-expired veterans.

WASHINGTON — The good news from the Pentagon this week is that the air force has just announced it will start training its crews to fight a "limited nuclear war" in case the United States should want to exercise that option.

While this is an encouraging sign, no one in Washington is quite sure what a limited nuclear war is and unfortunately neither is anyone in Moscow.

"Isn't a limited nuclear war like being a little bit pregnant?" I asked a source high in government circles.

"Certainly not. At the moment small nuclear wars have been considered unthinkable. But we hope that attitude will change, and countries will start thinking about them instead of large nuclear wars that could wipe out a continent."

"Everyone is for small nuclear wars," I said, "as opposed to large ones. But how do you persuade the other side that you're not engaging in a large one? How will we know if we're attacked with nuclear weapons that the Soviets or even the French have no intention of destroying the entire country?"

★ ★ ★

"It won't be easy," the source said. "But if we announce a nuclear strategy which is more flexible, then the Soviets will adjust their strategy accordingly.

"For example, suppose the Russians launched an attack on Mobile, Ala.; we would retaliate by hitting Minsk. If they then hit White Plains, N.Y., we would drop nuclear weapons on Kiev. That would be considered a limited nuclear war. As long as there weren't attacks on our major cities, both sides could live with it."

"I can see that. But how will we know that they are only engaging in a limited nuclear war?"

The source seemed irriatated. "That's what the hot line is for, stupid," he said. "The Soviets would alert us as to what cities they intend to bomb and we would alert them about cities we would hit.

"If they double-cross us and bomb New Orleans instead of Mobile, we'll just lay a little ol' nuclear bomb on Leningrad. Our insurance is that they don't want their entire country destroyed and neither do we."

★ ★ ★

"I guess we could all live without Mobile and White Plains," I said. "But by changing our strategy from the deterrent of mutual destruction to limited nuclear war, aren't we encouraging both sides to start seriously thinking about using 'A' weapons?"

"Yes and no. The important thing is that we must have more options. Right now the only option we have is to use our weapons for all-out destruction. The Soviets are also stuck with the same options.

"But, let's face it, if we could use our atomic weapons just to knock out a few Soviet factory towns in the Ukraine, the Russians would only be under an obligation to destroy some place like Detroit."

"Nobody would miss Detroit," I said. "But suppose we had some hawks in congress who got mad and said, 'No one can win a limited nuclear war. We have to go all out or nothing'?"

"You'll get some of that. But no president is going to get us involved in an all-out nuclear war. It would wreck the economy and play hayoc with inflation. So no matter how much pressure the hawks put on, the president will see that an 'A' war doesn't get out of hand."

★ ★ ★

"Now I know you're going to get mad at me for asking this question," I said. "But suppose one side or the other decides it is losing the limited nuclear war and, rather than face disgrace, turns it into mass destruction? What happens to your strategy then?"

"It will never happen."

"How do you know?"

"Because our military people aren't crazy."

"How do you know?"

"Because anyone who comes up with a limited nuclear war plan has to be sane."

"How do you know?"

HOLLYWOOD — Hottest new romance in Paris is that of Jean-Paul Belmondo and Christina Onassis, who has unlimited credit.

Christina, when she lived here and since she moved back to the Continent, had been going around with a sad face. No more.

She has been hitting Paris in high spirits and warm smile with the craggy-faced French movie star on her arm. She's like a new woman.

And what can you say about Belmondo? He's French. And that's sometimes what a woman needs to lift her spirits.

Jean-Paul has cheered some great beauties in the past — Brigitte Bardot and Ursula Andress, to name but two.

And Belmondo, one of the most successful and highest paid movie stars in the world, is no fortune hunter. And there are at least 500 million reasons why Christina must beware of that breed.

Norris Castle, an 18th century place, is considered to be famed architect James Wyatt's masterpiece. From 1831 to 1837, it was the childhood home of Queen Victoria. Before that it was visited often by King George IV. Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany also used to be a frequent visitor.

Mrs. Roche is hoping for lots of American tourists this summer to visit her fine collections of art and furniture from medieval times.

It's on the Isle of Wight. Once you get there, you can't miss it.

Itzhak says that since anyone who wears jewelry in New York is endangered, the collection is appropriately named. The jewelry is designed to feature endangered species of animals so as to publicize the cause of the environmentalists.

800,000 unemployed by mid-76—survey

PARIS (Reuter) — An international survey forecast Thursday a further increase in Canada's unemployment rate to 800,000 or 8 per cent of the labor force by the middle of next year.

The rise in unemployment, which started last July, became pronounced in the last quarter of 1974 and stood around 7.2 per cent in March this year, the survey said.

It predicted that consumer prices in Canada will rise at a rate of 11.8 per cent this year, progressively slowing down in the last quarter and decelerating further through the first half of next year.

The 24-country organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, of which Canada is a member, said in its annual review that 1975 may be a difficult year for Canada.

The OECD said that the combination of weak domestic demand and activity, rising unemployment, continuing strong inflationary pressures and a large external deficit, pose difficult problems for Canada's economic policy.

The review said that a rapid increase of wages had created a major difficulty for demand-management and had in part led to discussions about prices and incomes policy.

"Some additional stimulus to demand may be desirable," it said, "particularly if it will help the introduction and acceptance of a prices and incomes policy."

Canada's current external deficit is forecast to rise considerably this ear to between $5 billion and $6 billion — more than 3½ per cent of the gross national product.

But Canada should not have much difficulty financing a deficit of this size as its reserve position is strong and it can attract capital inflow.

The OECD said Canada's balance-of-payments deficit on the volume side is expected to improve towards the end of this year and early next year when United States demand improves.

But the outlook in value terms is much weaker as Canada's terms of trade have been worsening steadily since 1974 and are expected to go on doing so, with import prices rising more than twice as fast as export prices, it said.

The survey said it is "a matter for concern" that industrial earnings in Canada have recently been rising much faster than those in the United States.

Arab nations big spenders in sports sector

By JOSEPH FITCHETT
Colonist-Monitor Service

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The fairways are sprayed with oil instead of water — to protect them from wind erosion. The greens aren't actually green, but black, because they're made of oil-treated, compacted sand. The balls are red, because white would be invisible against the sun-bleached sand and rocks, and there is little or no grass in sight.

No, this isn't the spot Jack Nicklaus picks to practice his putting, but today such golf courses are sprinkled through the desert sands of the Persian Gulf — one example of a strong new appetite for sports, ranging from golf to soccer and karate, among the Arabs.

Soccer is lavishly subsidized in the oil-producing Arab peninsula countries, where oil income seeks any modernizing outlet. Every town in Saudi Arabia has at least one government-supported sports club. Kuwait boasts a dozen main soccer teams.

Equipment is provided free to youngsters, and stadiums are built for night matches to avoid the heat of the sun.

In more socialist-minded countries, such as Syria and Iraq, sports receive official encouragement too.

In Egypt, where soccer was introduced by the British in the 1920s and banned after the 1967 war, matches are quite popular. There are hundreds of soccer clubs — in cities, factories, schools, and military units. There are even women's teams.

So far, the Mideast has no professional teams for any sport, but training for coaches is starting to be offered.

Visits by international champions, such as soccer player Pele and fighter Muhammad Ali, have helped popularize sports here. Improved communications also are bringing TV coverage of European sports.

One of the most surprising sports catching on is karate. From lavishly fitted clubs in Beirut to army-run classes in Syrian schools or private tutoring in Persian Gulg states, self-defence sports have become the first body-contact sport of traditionally unsports-minded Arab youngsters.

As yet, Arab athletes have made little impact on the international sports scene. The Olympic Games next year, however, will attract national teams from at least a dozen Arab states.

The Arab-Israeli problem intrudes into sports on several fronts. In the 1972 Olympics at Munich, Arab teams withdrew after the terrorist attack on the Israeli team.

More recently they have sought to exclude Israelis from international competition and have had some success. When Israeli teams do compete, Arab teams default rather than compete directly.

In addition, the threat of terrorism has led to ponderous security arrangements.

Apart from these problems, in international competition Egyptians usually eye possible medals in swimming, gymnastics, and squash, while Lebanese stress weight lifting, swimming, and marksmanship disciplines in which individual Arabs have long excelled.

Other sports were the recreations of the wealthy elite, who adopted Western colonial games. Riding and shooting, for instance, were typical activities at which well-to-do Egyptians and Lebanese came to excel.

Golf, one of the games introduced by Westerners, has never disappeared (although Nassar's regime discouraged it in Egypt). Golf courses in Cairo remain spacious sports complexes. Many Egyptians had learned to enjoy the game, which appears set for a revival now, partly as a potential tourism incentive.

Recreational facilities are most highly developed in Lebanon, which possesses unrivalled variety in tarrain and climate.

The Lebanese mountains offer better-than-intermediate skiing on tree-free runs of several thousand yards. Water sports such as skiing and sailing are available too.

IWY parley opens

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Thousands of women poured into the Mexican capital Wednesday for the International Women's Year conference, the biggest global conclave ever held on women's rights.

The United Nations parley, the main event of the UN-declared International Women's Year, is scheduled to launch an action program aimed at ending discrimination against women and calling for their increased participation in world development programs and peace movements.

But President Luis Echeverria has suggested that a new world economic order — "which would benefit men and women alike" — should be the conference's major theme, rather than women's rights as such.

Some delegates arriving for the two-week parley which opened Thursday said the only road to development — and equality for women — is socialism, especially in third world nations.

Dr. Shirley Field-Ridley, Guyana's minister of information and culture, told the press, "in my country the only way to solve the problem of development is socialism."

The leader of the Cuban delegation, Vilma Espin, wife of Cuban deputy premier Raul Castro, said women's liberation could only be attained through radical, social, political, and economic change.

However, Patricia Hutar, co-leader of the United States delegation, said women were given in second place in capitalist and socialist nations alike.

As to what nation in the world today ranks highest in women's rights, American feminist journalist Gloria Steinem, editor of Ms. Magazine, said in an interview that the "most liberated women" are the Swedes, "although not totally."

As far as U.S. women are concerned, she said, "the American woman is still not liberated."

Plaza plans turn wasteland into elegance

By WILLIAM MARLIN
Colonist-Monitor Service

NEW YORK — Most city plazas have one thing in common: They offer precious little to divert and engage our attention.

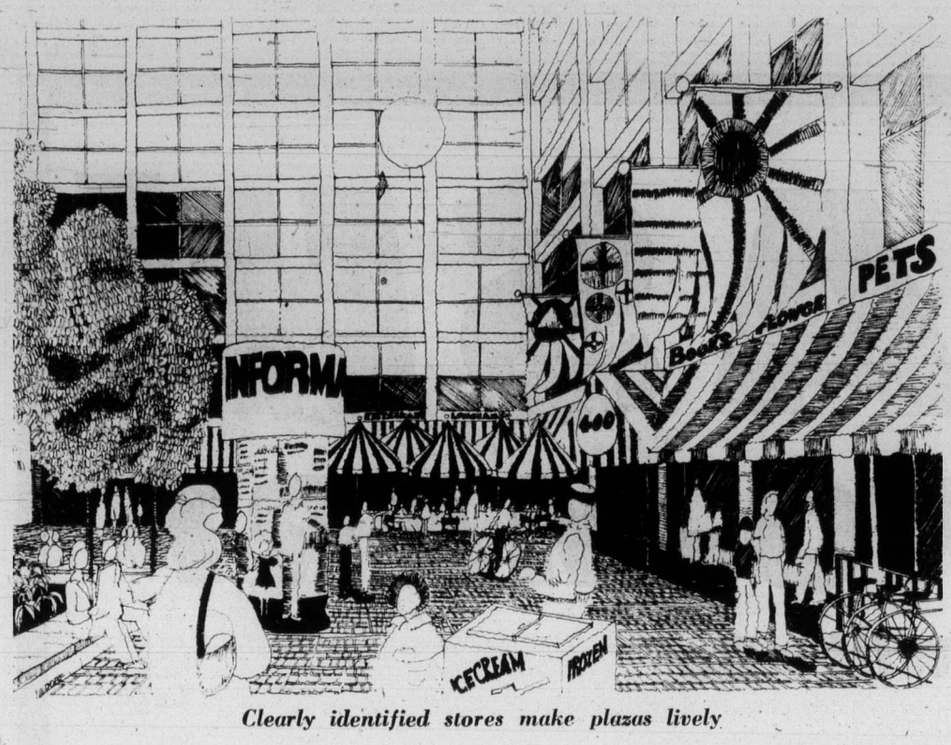
But an innovative zoning measure, prepared by the famous Urban Design Group of New York's department of city planning and now being reviewed by city officials, would encourage turning these wastelands into elegant expanses of paving—places with the power to pull people in and give them something to do.

Raquel Ramati, the Israeli-born architect who leads the group under department chairman John Zuccotti, explains:

"The average man or woman, increasingly alert to the quality of services and amenities which the city provides—or does not provide—is getting fed up with grand, sweeping schemes which . . . too seldom relate to their daily needs and desires . . .

"What could be more grand than seeing to it that, in the future, new development provides the kind of open spaces where people can really settle in, find a place to sit, perhaps a fountain with the movement and coolness to uplift the day, or where they can saunter among kiosks and shops selling flowers, food, books, even art?

"A plaza," she points out, "can be the most elegant affair in the world . . . but unless there are incentives to clad it with features and activities which people can feel part of, this most elegant affair will not be clad with much else—especially not with people who, after all, are the city."



Clearly identified stores make plazas lively

Architect Ramati views the "design" of meaningful legal mechanisms to enhance the city as seriously as she does the creation of delightful durable buildings.

Her proposal would build upon New York's 1961 zoning resolution, which encouraged developers to provide plazas by "rewarding" extra floor area — beyond what the zoning routinely permitted—in their new buildings: 10 square feet, in fact, for every square foot of plaza.

The 1961 regulation was the first act of recognition of the city's dwellers' right to daylight, elbow room, and breathing space. During the terms of former mayor John V. Lindsay, beginning in the mid-'60s, efforts were made to enlarge the trade-off program.

And Mayor Abraham D. Beame, grappling with the most serious financial crisis ever to hit New York, has perceptively encouraged chairman Zuccotti, one of the few holdovers from the Lindsay years, to carry on with developing more people-oriented design proposals.

The plaza idea is spreading to other cities.

The Ramati measure, which went before the city's Board of Estimate last month, would maintain the 1961 system of zoning trade-offs but would allow an increase of up to 20 instead of 10 per cent in a building's floor area.

Only three specific kinds of open space would be eligible for the negotiation:

- Open-air concourses for access of light, air, and pedestrians from a building's street-level space to an adjacent subway platform, mezzanine, or concourse.
- Sidewalk widenings, their extent depending on the dimension of bordering streets, to provide ample room for trees, bus shelters, benches, and, of course, a more affable pedestrian atmosphere.
- Urban plazas, fronting on a street or a sidewalk widening, for the use of large numbers of people.

- Within these three classifications, the Urban Design Group has been very specific about the kinds of features which are eligible for trade-off consideration.

For example, such open spaces are required to be adjacent to streets, enlivening the edge between them with trees and beds of planting; paving materials, in color and texture, would have to be compatible so that there is little, if any, "visual rip" between the developer's open space and the adjacent sidewalks; ease of access for disabled citizens would be mandatory, including handrails and ramps alongside stairs.

While such open spaces are, by definition, open to the sky, certain elements are urged: trees, sculpture, bike racks, fountains, benches, tables and chairs, kiosks (only of light materials and no more than one storey high), and open-air cafes.

A signal feature has to do with retail frontage—at least 50 per cent of a building's ground-floor walls which border on open spaces would include shops and services. The inclusion of library branches, small museums, and art galleries also would be encouraged.

Because of this proposal, a mix of uses, combining private and public benefit, would go hand in hand with a mix of people, pointing up that a city is not just a collection of hard-edged corporate and civic monuments but, fundamentally, a sequence of events and encounters.

As author William H. Whyte, for whom the study of plazas has become a passion, summed up last year, "Please, just a place to sit." His comment became the title of a fact-laden report in which Whyte demonstrates how few public open spaces provide even that.

Fortunately, as New York planners have now shown, a place to sit is not asking too much.

New abortion law

BONN (UPI) — West Germany's governing parties have proposed legislation to let women have abortions almost on demand after consultation with two doctors and a mandatory three-day waiting period to think about it.

Chancellor Helmut Schnmidt's Social Democrats and their Liberal partners, the Free Democrats, have agreed on the terms of their new abortion bill.

It largely follows advice given by the constitutional court in February when it rejected a more generously-drawn law.

The February decision declared abortion of an embryo at least two weeks old violates the constitutional guarantee of the right to life and therefore "is a homicidal act."

Who thought spinach could taste so good?

By EILEEN MEARS
Colonist-Copley News Service

"June has its own beauty," said Elizabeth Searle Lamb, "compounded of a special leaf pattern, a special green in foliage and bordered by a special song pattern of the nesting oriole, wren, thrush and cardinal, fragranced by the yellow rose and the early honeysuckle. It is really, a state of mind, this month of June."

Even with the eyes closed, there is warm wind, smell of clover, sound of bees, birdsong—promise of God's golden summer.

I have finished hoeing over the garden rows and they're weeded.

And I've just put compost around the tomato plants and added one cup fertilizer in a shallow encircling trench about one foot from each plant.

Any garden fertilizer with a nitrogen-phosphate-potash analysis of 5-10-5, 5-10-10 3-12-12, 5-20-20 or 10-10-10 would benefit tomatoes or many other vegetables. Remember, though tomatoes respond to liberal amounts of fertilizer, too much will hurt the plants. Never place fertilizer closer than 12 inches from the plant. Either mix fertilizer into surface inch of soil, or—as I did—make a shallow trench around plant, pour in fertilizer uniformly, and then cover with at least one inch soil.

Last, I set the wire baskets in place over each plant and apply a straw mulch.

Until harvest time, about all the care I give the plants is to poke the errant shoots back inside their wire cages.

Spinach and lettuce are at their tastiest best during these cooler days. To save time in meal preparation, wash and prepare both in quantities. Wash and drain WELL. Either invert a bucketful on your sink drainboard or place washed leaves in a large brown paper bag to drain. Then this is the "keeping" secret: Place spinach or lettuce in a second dry bag. Slip this into a large plastic bag, fasten with wire twister and refrigerate. Take out crisp, salad-ready leaves for at least a week.

Any Italian, oil and vinegar dressings, sour cream mixed with a package of cheese-garlic salad dressing mix (or blue cheese), or Pennsylvania Dutch dressing (cooked) goes well with fresh spinach.

We usually add a few sliced radishes, sliced sweet turnip, kohlrabi, onion, our own fresh mung bean sprouts, small pieces of Swiss or colby cheese or crisp, broiled, crumbled bacon. But other tasty additions are sliced water chestnuts, sliced hard-cooked eggs, sesame, sunflower or pumpkin seeds, raw mushrooms, canned bean sprouts, croutons, Parmesan cheese, chopped pecans (a Syrian salad) or Spanish peanuts.

For Pennsylvania Dutch spinach, fry two slices bacon until crisp. Add bacon to three cups raw, chopped spinach.

Add two tablespoons flour to drippings, blend and add one cup hot water, one tablespoon sugar, one tablespoon vinegar, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper. Cook until thickend Pour over spinach and stir until well thickened. Pour over spinach and stir until well mixed. Garnish with two hard-cooked eggs.

Or have you tried adding a teaspoonful Worchestershire sauce to your vinegar-oil dressing for wilted spinach or lettuce? Or chives or shallots instead of scallions? A few snipped sprigs of dill or parsley change the flavor, too.

If you own a versatile Oriental wok, do try this delicious hot spinach. Start with one tablespoon oil, bits of bacon, smoked ham, scallions or shallots and stir continually until crisply tender; add about three quarts spinach.

Season and stir-fry quickly until barely wilted tender.

Asparagus, stir-fried for eight to 10 minutes in either a wok or similar pan for sauteing, pleases the eye and the palate. Slice stalks thinly and add no water to the one tablespoon oil. If you don't have asparagus, try green beans (frozen, too) along with shallots and water chestnuts or mushrooms. It's amazing that one tablespoon oil will preserve the color, flavor and crispness of vegetables and seal in the natural juices of meat.

ann landers

Dear Readers: Every now and then I hear from a reader who spots himself in the column and asks to tell HIS side of the story. Today's column is truly extraordinary. Here's the original letter that prompted the follow-up:

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I accumulated $2500 in a local bank by depositing $5 and $10 a week. Our 20-year-old son, who does not live at home, entered our house when we were on vacation. He stole our passbook and withdrew $100 by forging his father's signature to our joint account.

He then proceeded to forge his father's name at this bank and other branches in the city. Within two weeks he emptied the account of all but $5.

He requested a duplicate bankbook, returned the original to our home and kept the duplicate, in the hope that he could replace the money before we found out what he had done.

We might have been spared all this grief had one person been alert. Why did they give him a duplicate passbook? How could so many people in the respected profession of banking have used such poor judgment?—Syracuse, N.Y.

Dear Syracuse: I find it fascinating that your complaint is against the bank employees when the real tragedy is that your son is a crook.

By Chicago banking consultant suggests that you contact the senior officer of your bank and seek his counsel. My advice is to try to get that boy into therapy at once.

This letter arrived today:

Dear Ann: I am the 20-year-old son who took my parents' bankbook and forged my father's signature.

First I'd like to tell you a little about my past. At age 16 my parents coisidered me a discipline problem and had me committed to a psychiatric hospital in Syracuse. After six months the doctor said, "This hospital is no place for you. I'm recommending a private school."

The day after my 17th birthday, off I went. I soon discovered it was no private school but a reformatory full of criminals. I learned every trick of the trade in that rathole. Forgery, robbery, flimflam—you name it. You called me a crook, Ann. Granted I did some criminal things, but I didn't pick them up on my own, nor would I have associated with such people if I hadn't been exposed to that environment.

I've tried every which way to help myself. I've sought the help of professionals when things got rough. I'm now 21 and still as bad off as I was back then. I called my mother the night your column appeared only to find that four warrants were out for my arrest in Syracuse. She said it was an act of God that I happened to read that column and maybe now I will learn something.

But I can't do it on my own. I was thrown out of the house at age 18 and have had no relationship with my parents whatsoever. It has been one hell of a struggle. If only I had parents I could talk to. But they've disowned me and I am running in fear. Can you help? — I Want To Stop.

Dear Want To Stop: Your need for love is heartbreaking. But don't give up you CAN be helped.

Call the Mental Health Clinic at Upstate University Hospital, 750 East Adams, Syracuse, N.Y., telephone 473-5540. Ask for an appointment with the psychiatrist in charge. I've already phoned in your behalf and they are waiting to help you. Please let me know how you get along.

Children 'doing time'

CHICAGO (AP) — A German prison is trying to prevent psychological damage to young children by allowing them to "serve time" with their mothers, an authority on child development reports.

Dr. Maria Piers, dean of the Erikson Institute for Early Education, recently visited the women's prison at Frankfurt where about 10 children, up to three years of age, are housed with their mothers, who are serving terms for lesser crimes such as larceny, theft or fraud.

The program, begun less than a year ago, "tried to be humane and non-punitive, and above all to prevent damage to the child by prolonged separation from the mother," she said in an interview.

Mothers and their children are assigned small, cheerful rooms where they can be alone and there is a lounge for evening use, she said.

During the day the mothers work in the prison laundry and their children are in a centre at the prison where they are cared for by graduate students in social work.

It is especially important for young children to remain with their mothers if the mothers "are even halfway adequate," she said.

Children who are taken from their mothers and who have no adequate mother substitute are often stunted in their growth, more prone to disease and intellectually retarded, she added.

Conservatory installation

At a recent dinner in honor of visiting examiners of the Alumnae of the Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto, Mrs. Armande Morton was installed as president of the Victoria chapter for the coming year. The dinner was held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Milburn and Warren Mould.

Modest goals set for summer season of Phoenix troupe

By JIM GIBSON
Colonist Reporter

The Phoenix Summer Theatre doesn't intend to rival Stratford or other summer festivals across the country.

That's not the mandate of the University of Victoria summer company, according to its co-artistic directors John Krich and Harvey Miller who pilot the theatre through a 29-performance repertory season of comedy starting next Friday.

"It's summer theatre for the community and hopefully some tourists will come by," Miller said in an interview.

Krich, who helped create the company in 1972 to fill he summertime theatre gap left by Victoria Fair ,sets modest goals for his summer theatre's future growth.

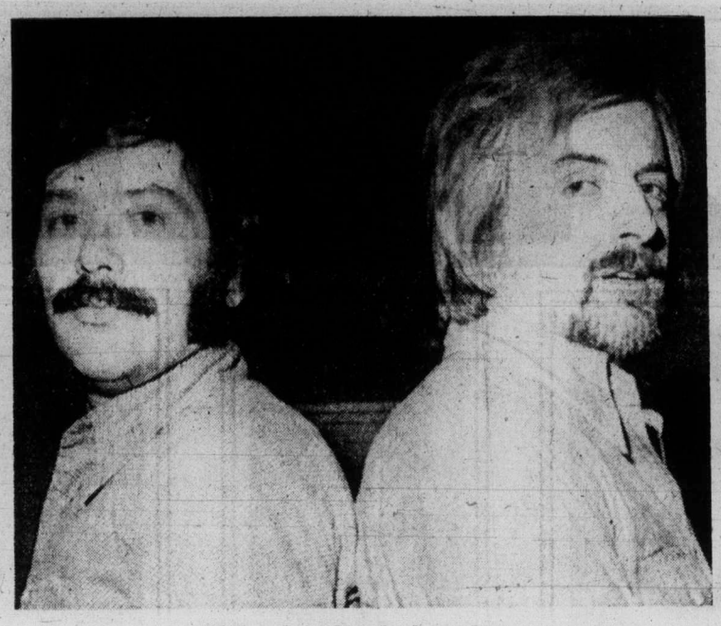
"I'd like to see it become a recognized summer event in Victoria," Krich said. But to do this would require hiring more experienced people, particularly in the technical end, along with a visiting artist for the season.

"I've no grandiose ideas about it; I'm not going to get another Stratford," Krich said.

And certainly, looking at the company's $22,000 budget from the province and mostly the university for the three productions in the 140-seat theatre, the company's scope is locked in by its bank account.

All but $3,000 of the budget goes to pay the 15 theatre department students who make up the company. Apart from Krich and Miller who receive salaries comparable with the rest of the summer session teaching staff, the going wage is only $65 a week.

"We lose some good kids because they just can't affort to come for the summer," Krich said.



Miller, left, Krich share duties

Even with the 11 volunteer company members, it still means that everyone must wear more than one hat.

As rehearsals ended Wednesday for What the Butler Saw, the season's first production, Jo Luke Krempasky stepped out of her actress role to tell the rest of the cast to "hang up their own costume." She designed them as well as those for the Woody Allen comedy, Play It Again, Sam, opening July 2.

Krich acts under Miller's direction in Butler and the roles are reversed in Broadway opening July 8.

The choice of plays for the season is certain to generate more box office support than the winter season when community tastes play second fiddle to what is experimental and intriguing for the theatre students.

But Krich and Miller insist that the straight season of light and black comedy was unintentional. Each director Tony Bancroft directs the Allen comedy offered a list of good plays and when all the hassles and hopes were cleared away only comedies remained.

Last season's sell-out Neil Simon comedy, The Last of the Red ot Lovers, may have influenced the artistic directors.

"A sell-out helps when you look at the box office and you have the university looking over your shoulder," Miller said, adding: "We do pick the season with an eye on what will get the people in."

Synod reappoints insemination study

QUEBEC (CP) — The general synod of the Anglican Church of Canada Tuesday decided to reappoint its task force on human life to continue a study of issues related to artificial insemination by donor (AID).

The synod gave the committee one year to complete its work and report findings to the church membership.

The committee has spent 18 months looking at moral problems involved with AID.

In a report to synod, the committee said the use of AID and embryo transfer "requires us to look hard at human nature and social institutions . . . and the moral values and theological reasoning which man must use in deciding what he may responsibly do."

Fahrenheit thermometer still popular

TORONTO (CP) — There is a heavy demand for thermometers with both Fahrenheat and Celsius scales marked on them, said Murray Duncan, general manager of the consumer products division at Taylor Instrument Companies of Canada Ltd.

He said the firm will sell more thermometers this year than last, but only one in eight thermometers sold have Celsius readings only.

Sales volume fell between Oct. 1, 1974, and April, 1975, because customers were reluctant to take thermometers in either Celsuis or fahrenheit, he said.

Although the firm stopped producing Fahrenheit thermometers last November, it has 25,000 of them in stock.

An official at Springfield Instrument Co. of Canada in Toronto said he expects an increase in sales, but no increase in profits because of the cost of converting Fahrenheit stock. The firm has a surplus of Fahrenheit stock valued at $80,000, including more than 5,000 thermometers.

Robert Harvey, a company director, said most thermometers sold are those which indicate both Celsius and Fahrenheit. Requests for units with Cedsius readings only have been one or two per cent of total demand.

Pierre Allard, sales manager at Thermometer Corp. of Canada in Montreal, said April sales were four times greater than usual.

"Sales in Fahrenheit dropped dead before April 1," he said, leaving the firm with $10,000 worth of old inventory. He said 90 per cent of all sales are those with both scales.

Robert Walker, general sales manager of the commercial department at Baker Instruments Ltd. in Toronto, said sales have been "exceptionally good for a time of year that is usually slow for thermometers," but added the over-all outlook is "far from pleasant."

"We can't get rid of Fahrenheit thermometers and nobody is going to compensate us for it."

He said the firm has $50,000 in unsold stock and the cost of converting Fahrenheit units to Celsius is between $5 and $10 each. Sales are evenly split between those giving both readings an dCelsius readings only.

Use lots of caution and suntan lotions

By BARBARA HERRERA
Colonist-Copley News Service

The season is upon us when the urge hits to bake in the sun in pursuit ofn that shimmery glow of sun-bronzed skin.

And down the beach comes galloping the nation's cosmetic industry brandishing trusty creams and lotions guaranteed to protect sunbathers from the distresses of burned, parched, wrinkled skin.

The confusion of advertising claims is enough to make a sun worshiper long for the old days when a mixture of iodine and baaby oil was considered sufficient protection from the strong rays.

But instead of retreating, skin-care experts are warning, it's better to arm yourself with knowledge about the sunburning process so you can sort out the products best for you.

What appears certain is that a great deal of caution and use of certain of these sun-protection preparations are healthful if this year's suntan is not to become next year's leathery, lined skin.

Sun damage to skin accumulates not only from day to day but from year to year.

Some dematologists warn some patients — especially women with fair, thin skin — not to sit in the sun at all. But if you are going to sunbathe, the key to the healthiest tan is in tanning slowly — slowly enough for the body's natural protection process to take over.

And, particularly for people with normal to dry skins, some extra protection with the advertised creams and lotions can be helpful.

In the suntanning process, the villain that burns your skin — the sun's ultraviolet rays — is also the hero that produces that healthy, golden glow of tan.

These ultraviolet rays coax a dark-toned pigment called melanin from the lower layers of your skin, where it's produced, to the top layer, where it builds up. As melanin accumulates it forms a natural protective shield against damage from further exposure to ultraviolet radiations. It also creates a rich, dark tone — what we call suntan.

But the problems occur when ultraviolet rays reach skin that's not protected by a shield of melanin pigment — or at least by a coat of ultraviolet-ray-screening lotion.

Exposure to the sun gradually — from 10 minutes to an hour a day, depending on your natural skin tone — allows time for melanin to build up slowly and naturally without damaging the skin. It's generally easiest for naturally dark-complexioned people.

The alternative to a nasty burn — and its accumulative aging effects — lies in caution. Here are some tips:

- Be most careful in the sun between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m., when the rays are strongest (some skin-care authorities frown on any sunning during these hours, especially for fair, thin-skinned people.).
- Sun tanning should be a process of building up pigmentation an hour at a time (or much less for fair-skinned people). The more slowly you build your own tan, the longer it will last. Too much sun makes skin overproduce a layer of cells that flakes or peels off quickly, taking your tan with it.
- Never lie out in the sun for four, five or six hours. It's as readily as lighter skin but too much too fast.
it does darken, and can even burn, in the sun.
- When applying lotions, backs of knees and neck. Reapply after going in the remember tips of ears, feet,
- Black skin doesn't burn water.
- People with oily skin can overdo it with the creams and should never use a greasy suntan cream or oil.
- Cover your hair in the sun if your hair is bleached or colored. The sun can react with chemicals to turn your gorgeous blonde to tattletale orange.
- Certain drugs such as antibiotics, diuretics and some tranquilizers can cause skin to become more sensitive to the sun's rays. Check with your doctor.
- If you get a sunburn with skin blisters, pain, headache and faintness, you may have second-degree burns and a visit to a doctor is recommended.

Nonbreathing spells studied

SEATTLE (UPI) — Crib death researchers have zeroed in on nonbreathing periods experienced by children and adults alike during sleep and are very close to understanding the mysterious infant killer, according to a pioneer in study of the disease.

Dr. J. Bruce Beckwith, pathologist at Children's Orthopedic Hospital here, said those nonbreathing spells, called apnea, now represent the principal focus of crib death research.

Beckwith is a member of the board of medical advisors to the National Foundation for Sudden Infant Death and, in 1965, conducted the original research program on the disease known officially as Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

He said in an interview that several research projects now going on around the country are directed at a relatively infrequent type of apnea, called obstructive apnea. This phenomenon involves collapse of the throat muscles and results in blockage of the upper respiratory passage.

But Beckwith cautioned against the temptation on the part of parents to look to monitoring devices which would warn of apneac spells.

"I strongly suspect," he said, "that a child experiencing a spell which is going to prove lethal could not be resuscitated, even if a person were immediately available to attempt revival."

Beckwith said researchers have long known that apnea occurred in infants, "although for a long time we thought it occurred only in premature infants.

"Recent studies, however, indicate that rather long periods of apnea, up to 30 seconds, are experienced by a large percentage of normal, healthy babies," he added.

Bunnies rally over rules governing Hefner hutch

CHICAGO (AP) — Eleven women from Chicago's Playboy Club staged a rally here seeking greater freedom for bunnies.

Playboy owner Hugh Hefner "claims to be in the forefront of sexual liberation, but he doesn't even give us our own personal freedom," said Donna Greenwood, 24.

Miss Greenwood said most of the 80 bunnies in the Chicago club want fewer rules governing their social lives. She added that one rule that should be changed is the restriction against bunnies dating Playboy keyholders.

The scantily dressed women marched down a main Chicago street, toting protest signs.

Jagger wets fans' appetite

Mick Jagger, lead singer of Rolling Stones, showers audience with bucket of water during rock group's Toronto concert. Group's appearances Tuesday and Wednesday at Maple Leaf Gardens, both featuring standing-room-only crowds of more than 18,000, were part of North American tour. Jagger actually threw two buckets of water into the audience "to cool things down."

City 'Y' to start co-ed camping

Victoria's YM-YWCA Camp Thunderbird is introducing co-ed camping this year for the first time in its history in the eight to 15-year-old age group.

"If this experiment is successful, co-ed camps may very well be the thing of the future at Camp Thunderbird," said outdoor education director John Durkin on Tuesday.

Co-ed camps are not new for the Y's Outdoor Wilderness III adult camping program for the day camp program. The Calgary YMCA has offered successful co-ed residential camping for the past two years with no plans for reverting to the former segregated camping sessions.

The co-ed camp at Thunderbird, on Glinz Lake near Sooke, will be held from June 28 to July 5 and will be for boys and girls, aged eight to 15.

Girls' camps will be held from July 6 to 19, two weeks, and from July 20 to 26, one week. Boys' camps will be held from July 27 to Aug. 2, one week; from Aug. 3 to 16, two weeks and from Aug. 17 to 23, one week.

All are for ages eight to 15. The fee is $50 a week. Campers may go to camp on these dates or combine two or all three camps.

Further details are available from the Y, 386-7511.

Inmates display art at library today

Watercolors, oils, monotints and small sculptures pieces — the work of prisoners at William Head institution — will be on display in the central branch of the Greater Victoria Public Library, Yates and Blanshard, starting today.

The show will include 40 works by three inmates, and will be held on the second floor of the library in space formerly occupied by the library's framed art reproduction collection which has been discontinued.

An arts and crafts program has been carried on at William Head for more than a year under the direction of instructor Jim Lindsay.

The works, which will be on show for a week, will be part of a Canadian penitentiary art exhibition to be shown across Canada next year.

9 IN MEMORIAM

STONEHOUSE — In loving memory of a beloved husband, Walter Mathew, step-father, grandfather, who passed away June 20, 1974.
There is no parting from those we love.
No distance can divide
For each day in memory's garden
We still walk side by side.
Wherever life may take us,
Dear love we may die,
The memory of the years we shared
Will keep us close to you.
They are not lost our well beloved
Nor have they travelled far,
Just stepped inside God's loveliest room
—Sadly missed by his wife Beryl, step-daughter Margo and Moe Elwonibi, step-sons David, and Tom and Brenda Tudor, grandchildren Sandra, Karen and Duane Tudor Mohammed and Michael Elwonibi.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

Electric auto firms growing

By DAVID T. COOK
Colonist-Monitor Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Sales are increasing in the fledging electric auto business, and a congressional committee is considering legislation to stimulate even faster growth in the industry.

Over 1,000 Americans now commute to work in vehicles that consume electricity rather than more expensive gasoline, according to Electric Vehicle Council data.

Most of the electrically powered cars are used for personal commuting over relatively short distances at moderate speeds. But several electric vehicles have recently been purchased by the Avis Corporation for tourist rental in temperate climes. (Cold weather tends to reduce the efficiency of the battery-powered cars).

The cars are refuelled by plugging their batteries into an electric socket. The cost of recharging is one cent per mile, industry executives say. At current gasoline prices a conventional car would have to get 53 miles to the gallon to equal an electric auto's fuel cost.

Electric cars roll off assembly line

Electric-vehicle sales, which spurted with the Arab oil boycott, have continued to advance despite the relative glut of gasoline currently available in the United States, a variety of industry sources say.

"Sales are up most definitely," says Bob Stone, marketing manager at Sebring-Vanguard, Inc., a maker of the Citicar. About 1,000 of the vehicles priced at $2,700 have been purchased.

The Elcar, an Italian import, is the only other electrically powered auto on general sale in the United States. "Sales have really started to pick up," says Elcar Corporation marketing director Bob Culver.

To meet the domestic demand, Elcar expects to be assembling electric vehicles in a plant in Indiana by the end of the year. The two Elcar models sell for $2,995 and $3,395.

Next month the first "luxury" electric car is slated to go into production, and the first "Transformer I" is expected to roll off the assembly line in August. The option-loaded vehicle, produced by Electric Fuel Propulsion Corporation, will sell for $16,450. An auxiliary power generating trailer is $8,580 extra.

□

The firm says it has received "several hundred orders" for the car accompanied by deposits and letters of credit.

Four other firms also have announced their intention to go into electric automobile manufacturing in the future, the Electric Vehicle Council says.

While electric-car sales have quickened, they still represent only a minor fraction of conventional auto sales.

The most optimistic data put total electric car sales to date at about 1,300 units — or about 1 per cent of the cars produced by the depressed conventional auto industry in one week.

The electric auto manufacturers' lack of financial muscle is one reason for the relatively minor sales of electric cars. Citicar's Stone notes his firm is "privately owned with under 25 investors" and as a result has "not waged a full-scale" marketing campaign.

A subcommittee of the U.S. House Science and Technology Committee held four days of hearings a few days ago on legislation that would aid the electric-auto industry and might lead to more aggressive marketing as a result of a stronger financial footing.

Legislation (HR 5470) sponsored by some 60 House members would require the government to spend $40 million annually on electric-auto research and development.

Under the legislation, the government would purchase 5,000 electric cars for testing by various levels of government and by the general public.

The subcommittee now is reviewing the hearing transcript to decide what action to take next. The key question, subcommittee sources say, is whether further legislative action on the bill should be delayed for a year or two pending expected improvements in battery technology.

Such improvements, if they materialize, could increase the current 50 miles or under range of electric cars, and might also boost their 40-miles-an-hour top cruising speed.

U.S.-Soviet space hook-up

Scientists fear lightning

By FRAN MACOMBER
Colonist-Copley News Service

The U.S.-Russian space linking extravaganza is scheduled for 11 days after the Fourth of July, but there may be fireworks at launch time anyhow for three American astronauts.

July is Florida's incomparable lightning season, so the July 15 launch date for the American half of the Apollo-Soyuz space hookup falls right in the middle of it.

Lightning is a natural foe of spacecraft and their sophisticated electronics systems, not only on the launch pad but during the first critical seconds of flight after lift-off as well.

Nature made its point in 1969 when lightning struck the Apollo 12 spacecraft during lift-off and nearly forced a mission abort.

This month a team of government and university scientists are trying to find out if they can predict in advance when it will be safe to launch the U.S. Apollo-Saturn spacecraft through the crackling midsummer atmosphere over Kennedy Space Centre, Fla.

They're using three instrumented aircraft and an elaborate ground network to put together a three-dimensional map of the atmosphere's electrical fields around the space centre. The next task will be to determine the conditions when a rocket penetrating the fields might trigger a lightning strike.

By early July, the Project Lightning Bug scientists hope to be able to forecast what electrical conditions will be at and over the launch pad 10 to 20 minutes before lift-off time, now scheduled for July 15 at 3:50 p.m. EDT.

The Soviet Soyuz spaceship, carrying two cosmonauts, is scheduled for launch from the Baykonur Cosmodrome near Tyuratam in the Soviet Union at 8:20 a.m. EDT, 7.5 hours earlier the same day.

The spacecraft are to rendezvous and dock two days later in a 140-mile-high earth orbit, remaining locked together for 48 hours while the five spacement conduct joint mock rescue operations and five scientific experiments.

Then Soyuz will cut loose and land in the Soviet Union about 6:50 a.m. EDT, July 21. Apollo will circle the earth alone until July 24, then land at 5:19 p.m. EDT in the Pacific near Hawaii.

Project Lightning Bug meanwhile is being conducted by scientists from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), the Naval Research Laboratory, NASA, the New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology and the University of Arizona.

Dr. Heinz Kasemir of NOAA's Atmospheric Physics and Chemistry Laboratory is directing the NASA-financed project.

For the scientists, June is a month of rough-riding flights under and around all types of convective clouds in aircraft equipped to measure atmospheric electrical fields. A Naval Research Laboratory Grumman S-2 is flying low-level missions. Mid-level flights are the mission of NASA's specially equipped Beechcraft C-45.

High-altitude patterns around thunderstorms are being flown by the most exotic member of the squadron, a Schweizer 845-A powered glider owned by the Office of Naval Research and operated by the New Mexico Institute at Socorro. The slow, high-flying craft is penetrating frozen cloud "anvils" — the cirrus clouds swept off the tops of thunderstorms by upper-level winds.

"We have no information on the electrical fields in the anvil," Dr. Kasemir says. "Since the anvil may be over the space centre while the storm is still many miles away, we need to know whether there is an electrical hazard for the rocket as it penetrates the thin shield of the anvil clouds."

The field-mapping ground network was built for NASA by the NOAA atmospheric electricity team in 1973.

It consists of 24 electric field measuring stations installed around the space centre. Data from these feed into a computer which processes the information and displays it on a television console, updating it once each second.

The video display shows a map of the area and ground stations, electrical activity in nearby storms, radar contours of rain and the positions of lightning strikes as they occur.

Dial-a-disease used in Florida

MIAMI (AP) — Residents who need to know quickly about any of 300 medical problems ranging freom head injuries to varicose veins and vasectomies to menopause are having their questions answered by telephone.

Tel-Med was developed recently by area medical and charitable organizations to help callers remain healthy, recognize the early signs of illness and adjust to serious sickness, a spokesman said.

The caller asks an operator for a numbered tape, and then settles back to hear a three-to-five-minute discussion of that particular medical problem. There is no charge for the service.

The information is recorded on eight-track cartridges in English and Spanish. It is carefully reviewed for accuracy by a panel of Dade County doctors.

Ellen Carter, Tel-Med supervisor, said the service is receiving about 500 requests a day for the recorded messages.

Consumer pays conversion cost

WINNIPEG (CP) — The consumer will pay the cost of conversion to the metric system of weights and measures in supermarkets, metric commission members said.

"The cost incurred in the conversion process will rest with the consumer," said Gord Macy, a representative of Loblaws.

The "working group on scales," as the committee is known, met here to discuss the problems of metric conversion in the food industry.

Another member said it was too early to estimate the cost of conversion.

"It's like asking what the price of meat will be in 1980," said Don Graham, president of the Canadian Association of Scale Manufacturers.

Macy said his company and others will seek concessions from both levels of government.

"What we are looking for is fast write-off privileges and tax and duty concessions."

Graham said the committee is confident Canada can proceed ahead with the metric conversion by 1978.

"We hope planning will solve any problems we might face later as we proceed with the conversion. But I am optimistic that the conversion will go ahead without too many problems."

36,000 making strike decision

By WARREN CARAGATA
Colonist Reporter

About 36,000 forest, fishing, food retailing and hospital workers are taking strike votes in B.C. this week.

About 2,000 members of the Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America will complete their vote this week and the ballots will be counted at the weekend, Roger Lewis, IWA Local 1-118 president, said Thursday night. The other 30,000 members of the coast region of the IWA will finish their votes by the end of next week.

George Johnston, business manager of Local 212 of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers, said Thursday about 800 meatcutters employed by Safeway, Super-Valu, Shop-Easy and independent food stores will finish their vote today and the ballots will be counted either today or Monday.

About 2,500 paramedics represented by the Health Sciences Association employed in 81 B.C. hospitals started taking a strike vote Thursday, and 600 tendermen, members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union will be voting until Wednesday on whether to authorize a strike. Another 2,000 shoreworkers in the fishing industry will vote Wednesday on possible job action.

Lewis said the crucial point in forest industry negotiations will come today when the IWA and the Forest Industrial Relations meet with provincial mediator Fred Geddes. The IWA has asked for an increase of $1 an hour in a one-year contract.

"There is absolutely no movement on the part of the industry. They are provoking things at this stage," Lewis said.

Police believe bandits fled in plane or copter

$1 million Quebec bank heist

BAIE COMEAU, Que. — A Quebec Provincial Police spokesman in this community, 220 miles northeast of Quebec City, said Thursday police recovered a car used in a $1.06 million bank holdup Thursday morning.

"We recovered the getaway car, a black 1967 Chrysler, about 30 miles from here," he said.

"We have no further clues, though, and we don't expect any arrests for the time being."

It was believed to be the largest bank robbery in Quebec in more than a decade.

The police said earlier three masked men armed with machine guns burst into a branch of Bank Canadian National, at the Manic 3 hydro-electric dam site 50 miles north of here and fled with the money.

"We're pretty sure now the bandits used a plane or helicopter to escape and we've alerted various airports in the area to watch out for them.

"There are 35 to 40 men on the case from the QPP and two municipal forces," he said. "We also expect a QPP helicopter and police dogs to arrive soon."

Police sealed off roads within a 50-mile radius of the holdup and were searching cars at roadblocks.

A police spokesman said earlier the bank's manager and assistant manager were taken hostage by the thieves but were released about 10 miles from the scene of the holdup.

The stolen money was part of a payroll for more than 2,500 Hydro-Quebec employees working at the site.

Police could not say how many employees were in the bank at the time of the robbery and bank officials could not be reached, but no shots were fired and no one was hurt.

A spokesman said the suspects were last seen heading south towards Baie Comeau along a road following the west bank of the Manicouagan river.

Montreal police said the loot taken in the robbery was the most stolen in Quebec since a Montreal bank was robbed of the same amount about a decade ago.

Two weeks ago, bandits drilled into a safety-deposit vault and looted deposit boxes at Lachine, Que. Police believe the robbers took close to $1 million but the exact amount has not been determined.

Queen sends general to Amin

LONDON (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth dispatched a personal messenger to President Idi Amin of Uganda Thursday night in an 11th-hour appeal for the life of a British lecturer facing execution in the East African nation.

The Briton, Dennis Hills, 61, is to go before a firing squad Saturday after conviction of treason. He described Amin in the unpublished manuscript of a book as "a village tyrant."

A Buckingham Palace spokesman said British Army Lt.-Gen. Chandos Blair flew to Kampala with a "personal message from the queen in her role as head of the Commonwealth."

Blair, 56, currently serves with the army's Scottish Command. He was Amin's commanding officer 16 years ago when the Ugandan leader was a member of a British Army unit known as the King's African Rifles.

On the East African Airways flight with Blair was Hills' 15-year-old son Hanson, who said he hoped to visit his father in his death-row cell in Kampala.

Amin also demanded a number of concessions from Britain as his price for sparing the Briton's life. These included supplying military spare parts to Uganda, expelling Ugandan exiles from Britain and stopping what he called "malicious propaganda" emanating from Britain.

Motorcyclist pushes bike against howling clouds of sand near Palm Springs

Cars sandblasted for fourth day

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Driving winds and whirling sands described as "the worst storm in 20 years" whipped through the desert for the fourth straight day Thursday, plaguing motorists who ignored warnings to stay off the highways.

"The winds are still blowing and people who drive the highways can expect to have their cars damaged," said Deidre Woods of the Southern California Automobile Club.

"But some people keep travelling, people who don't live here and don't know how vicious the wind can be. I keep telling them it's bad, but they ask if they can drive anyway. I tell them the roads are open but they have to travel at their own risk."

The main highway near this resort town, Interstate 10, was closed for several hours Tuesday night and Wednesday when winds up to 90 miles per hour piled sand headlight high around cars and stranded hundreds of motorists.

The winds abated somewhat on Wednesday and the highway was reopened to drivers willing to take the risk. Interstate 15, the main freeway between Los Angeles and Las Vegas, Nev., also reopened Wednesday despite continued winds that threatened to leave motorists stranded.

"We've had 300 calls in the past two days," an auto club dispatcher in Palm Springs said Thursday, "and it's only dropping off a little today."

"Most of the cars get stalled from sand in the carburator, or else the windshields get pitted so bad they can't see even though the cars still run.

"We had some overturned trucks too. There were a few cars where the wind blew out the window, and some cars stranded overnight had the paint stripped off right down to the metal. It's unreal."

Indication in Monday's budget

8-cent fuel hike likely

OTTAWA (CP) — Price increases this year for gasoline, home-heating fuel and natural gas probably will be indicated in the federal budget Monday.

Signs point to an increase of eight cents a gallon for gasoline and heating oil.

Although no estimates have been released officially on new prices for crude oil and natural gas to producers, most government and industry sources say they expect an increase of $2 a barrel on oil and one of 20 cents to 30 cents a thousand cubic feet on natural gas.

That would increase the price of gasoline and home-heating fuel by eight cents a gallon and raise the annual natural gas bill of an average homeowner by between $30 and about $45. Such an increase would add $1.5 billion annually to consumer spending.

Ottawa says higher prices are needed to encourage a search for more oil and natural gas in the face of reports that Canada will be short of petroleum in the 1980s.

The industry says it needs both higher prices and some cuts in the tougher resource taxes imposed by Ottawa on them last year.

The industry says that even with a $2 increase for a barrel of oil, now $6.50, companies would lack enough money to step up exploration programs.

They say they hope for some changes in the budget.

"I can't believe Ottawa intends to maintain the exisiting taxes," said a spokesman for the Canadian Petroleum Association. "But there have been no signs of a reduction."

Imperial Oil Ltd. and Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. say the consumer will benefit little from the anticipated increase in crude prices. There would be little money for exploration.

Gulf President Jerry MacAfee estimates that if taxes are unchanged, the companies would get three cents from a

Oil, gas reserves guess plummets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government geologists slashed their estimates of America's Atlantic offshore oil riches by a dramatic 80 per cent Thursday and said the entire nation may have only a third the undiscovered oil and gas resources thought to exist a year ago.

In a detailed report to the Federal Energy Administration, the U.S. Geological Survey said the untapped Atlantic frontier out to a depth of about 650 feet may contain only 2 to 4 billion barrels of oil instead of the 10 to 20 billion estimated in 1974.

For all of the nation's offshore areas, the report showed, estimates of oil resources have been cut from last year's 65 to 130 billion barrels to a much more conservative 10 to 49 billion.

Onshore oil estimates, it showed, now stand at 37 to 80 billion barrels instead of the 135 to 270 billion reported in 1974.

Similar reductions also were made for undiscovered natural gas reserves.

Two lab dogs smoked out

LONDON (AP) — A group of animal lovers said Wednesday it freed two dogs from a laboratory where they were being forced to smoke cigarettes in the search for a cancer-free tobacco substitute. An anonymous caller who telephoned a domestic news agency said one of the dogs wheezed "like a human being who has smoked for 30 years." Imperial Chemical Industries acknowledged that the dogs had disappeared from their kennels.

Leftists jeer at church HQ

Troops aid Catholics

Colonist Wire Services

LISBON — Heavily armed soldiers standing shoulder to shoulder cleared a path through a mob of angry leftists Thursday to let more than 120 Roman Catholic clerics, nuns and laymen escape from the church headquarters where they had been besieged for 17 hours.

Several hundred leftists, some wielding sticks, jeered "Fascists! Fascists!" as the Catholics were loaded aboard canvas-covered army trucks on the sun-drenched Square of the Martyrs.

Antonio Cardinal Ribeiro, the patriarch of Lisbon and the country's ranking prelate, and the other Catholics were chased inside the building Wednesday night by thousands of leftists wielding sticks.

The Catholics had been protesting the takeover of a church-owned radio station by Communist workers and the leftists — who accuse the church of having supported the former right-wing dictatorship — called a counter-demonstration.

The leftists smashed windows and burned a car. On the shell they put a sign: "This car belonged to a priest who worked for the secret police."

Heavily armed police surrounded the building and some of the Catholics escaped Thursday morning. But most refused to leave until the army brought covered trucks to protect them from the mob.

Indian wives seek police shield

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Indian Homemakers Association of B.C. has asked for police protection for some delegates to the group's annual conference in Richmond, association president Rose Charlie said Thursday.

She said in an interview she is arranging protection for women who spoke out at the conference against the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs' policy of rejecting government funds.

No incidents occurred at the conference, which ended Thursday, but some delegates said they were concerned about their safety when they returned to their home reserves.

An RCMP spokesman in Richmond said Mrs. Charlie has written an official note to the police.

"We are certainly acting to assess it and will provide assistance if required," said the spokesman.

Irene Harris of Chemainus said in an interview the band office was broken into Wednesday and files taken.

She also said some members on her reserve had accused her of using band funds for the conference and she expected to face further accusations when she gets home.

Agnes Dick of the Sheshat band at Port Alberni and Mrs. Harris both said at the conference the Indian leaders are putting children in the front lines to force a settlement on land claims by rejecting government aid.

Mrs. Dick said the conference was intimidated by Indian leaders and that those bands which wish to continue government funding are harassed.

"I have nothing against the land-claim issue," Mrs. Dick said Thursday. "But the people who are pushing it don't consult the majority."

Washed ashore

Man's body found

PARKSVILLE — A 35-year-old Lasqueti Island man drowned either Wednesday or Thursday after his boat apparently overturned on a trip from French Creek to Lasqueti Island.

Parksville RCMP said that the man's body was found Thursday by a fisherman washed ashore on Jenkins Island, northeast of Parksville.

The man's name is being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Police said they have determined that the man left French Creek for his island home Wednesday afternoon with a heavy load of groceries aboard his boat.

"Somebody suggested to him that his boat appeared to be overloaded," a police spokesman said.

The boat was found overturned in Georgia Strait Wednesday afternoon but police did not link it to a drowning since no one had been reported overdue or missing.

"We attempted to find the owner of the boat but we could not," the spokesman said.

The man's body wasn't found until Thursday afternoon and it was then linked with the overturned boat.

Police said at first they thought the man's wife and children had also been lost at sea since they were last seen with him at the French Creek dock. They were later found to be visiting the Campbell River area.

Crown land subdivided

Parksville chamber claims province 'ignoring bylaws'

By MILDRED KURTZ
Colonist Correspondent

PARKSVILLE — Parksville and District Chamber of Commerce has rapped the provincial government for ignoring the bylaws set down by the Nanaimo Regional Board by subdividing crown land into two and a half-acre lots in the Little Mountain area near Errington.

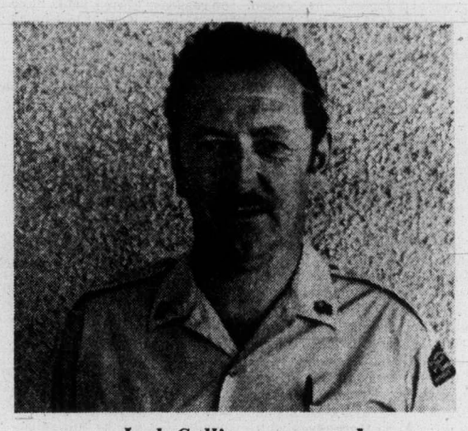
Although the regional board does not have jurisdiction over crown land, the chamber thinks the government should abide by the bylaws which call for not less than 12 acre parcels in the Errington area in which the land is situated.

The chamber also thinks that the government action will endanger an attempt to save the banks of Englishman River from development.

It had earlier been suggested that a trade of crown land be arranged with a Vancouver developer to save the river bank in the interest of ecology. The new move by the provincial government would remove the possibility of a swap, the chamber says.

At a recent meeting of the Parksville Chamber of Commerce, a motion was approved to make a strong protest to the government about overriding lot size regulations of the regional board, and also a motion to press the government to consider exchanging land for river frontage.

Chamber president Andrew Pearson said it is unfair competition for the government to do as it pleases, while citizens are subject to local laws.



Jock Collier: promoted

New head named

DUNCAN — RCMP Sergeant Jock Collier will take over the reins of the 22-man detachment here July 15.

Staff-sergeant William Gilchrist, who has been in the Cowichan Valley for two years, is being transferred, and Collier is being promoted to staff-sergeant.

Collier, who has been in the force for 22 years, has spent his last four years in Duncan.

Recently he was honored for his outstanding contribution to local and in the RCMP Victoria subdivision sports.

He takes an active interest in hockey, softball and curling within the subdivision, and last year coached the successful Cowichan Lakers to the Big 6 league championship.

Gilchrist, who has 24 years with the RCMP, has been transferred to the 15-man Creston detachment.

Nanaimo church break-in

Two boys facing charges

NANAIMO—Charges of committing a delinquency involving break, entry and theft are to be laid here against two 15-year-old boys in connection with the break-in on the weekend at Mount St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church here.

Police said at the time that a quantity of cigarettes, candy, two tape recorders and some wine were taken by thieves. In addition, there was damage to the inside of the church, mostly involving broken and destroyed doors and door frames—estimated at $5,000.

A police spokesman said he estimated that the culprits were in the buildings for about five hours early Monday morning.

The two are to appear in juvenile court in Nanaimo.

NORTH COWICHAN — A developer has received council support to keep single-wide mobile homes out of a new 54-lot subdivision here.

North Cowichan council gave three readings to a resolution that will rezone all lots in Cowichan River Estates from rural to rural restricted.

The developer, Stirling Estates Ltd. of Surrey, had requested the rural restricted zoning, which restricts sitings of single-wide mobile homes, because they wanted "to maintain the higher standard of housing in the development."

Only one alderman, Dennis Hogan, voted against the motion. He maintained, "If people want to move out in the country, what's wrong with a mobile home?"

□

COURTENAY — July 25 is the date set for the fifth annual Courtenay-Comox Chamber of Commerce-sponsored market day.

Fifth Street will be blocked off between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m., creating a pedestrian mall between Cliffe Avenue and Fitzgerald.

Stalls will be set up and a varied entertainment program is planned, said chairman Frank Lockwood.

Theme of the annual fun day is to be based on the city's diamond anniversary.

Lockwood outlined plans for this year's program at a chamber meeting this week.

He said because the chamber lost money on the venture last year, it will be necessary to hike the rate for stall space for non-chamber members to $20 from $12.50.

The local Gymnastics Club will be putting on demonstrations and several bands, including the Courtenay Legion Pipe band, and area musicians will be performing throughout the day.

□

PARKSVILLE — A first for Parksville is a trade fair being sponsored by Parksville and District Chamber of Commerce in conjunction with Parksville Pageant Days July 11, 12 and 13. The trade fair will be held in District 69 Arena which provides ample space for varied exhibits.

More than 50 per cent of the booth space has been sold to date, and interest is high in this new project. Proceeds after expenses will go towards operation of the local tourist bureau and the pageant committee with any residue from the split to a local charity.

Participation in the trade is open to both commercial and non-profit groups also for the exhibit of arts and crafts or any hobby display. Some members of the business community who do not have suitable items for display are sponsoring non-profit organizations such as senior citizens' groups by providing a booth at no cost to the exhibitors.

□

COURTENAY — A road network proposal for the Comox Valley will be one of the items on the agenda Thursday at a public meeting to discuss the Comox-Strathcona region board planning study.

The first in a series of meetings to discuss the study was held two weeks ago. Other meetings will be held throughout the regional district.

Discussion at next week's meeting will also include problems of coastal development and identification of potential development areas.

The meeting starts at 7:30 p.m. at the Upper Island Health Unit building.

DUNCAN — Central Vancouver Island Health Unit seeks post-stroke and paraplegic persons to help in student program.

Three students will be conducting research on the nature of requirements of such people, and assisting them in the formation of a social club which will cater to their particular needs.

Persons interested in the program should contact the central Vancouver Island Health Unit in Duncan.

NANAIMO — Work is near completion on a $338,000 telephone cable and equipment addition between Nanaimo and Parksville," B.C. Telephone Co., Nanaimo district plant manager, Jim Gural, said Thursday.

He said the project will provide the telephone circuits needed to keep pace with the increase in local and long distance calling volumes.

"The project includes the installation of over 15 miles of new aerial and buried telephone cables and transmission equipment, all scheduled for completion by late summer."

Gural said the addition of equipment will provide for the present and future telephone needs of customers in Nanaimo, Lantzville, Nanoose and Parksville.

'Right' price buys sugar

NANAIMO — The strike by workers of the B.C. sugar refining company has left Nanaimo stores, for the most part, completely out of sugar.

But, according to rumors, one can buy sugar at the 'right' price.

There was word here Wednesday, although not confirmed or admitted to, that at least one retailer had managed to get a shipment of sugar and was selling it for a reported price of 59 cents a pound. The average price of sugar in Nanaimo supermarkets, when its available, is 31 cents a pound.

CAMPBELL RIVER — Police were searching Thursday for two prisoners who escaped from the minimum security Snowden Forestry camp Sunday. RCMP identified the men as Wesley Richard Brinkman, 22, and Stanley Gaulska, 38.

Noise charge

Nanaimo man fined

NANAIMO — A Nanaimo businessman, Joe Eberts, has been fined $25 in provincial court here after being found guilty of violating the city's anti-noise bylaw.

Eberts was charged as the owner of the California Joke and Book Shop and Arcade on Commercial Street. It was alleged that a juke box on the premises was playing loudly into the street.

Eberts has also been asked to meet with city council in the near future to discuss charges of open drinking, foul language, litter and other complaints on his premises.

The complaints, along with a request that Eberts business licence be lifted, have been made by the Nanaimo City Centre Merchants Association.

The arcade he operates is a gathering point for large numbers of teenagers.

Eberts is expected to meet with council in a committee session next week.

Committee operation criticized

NORTH COWICHAN — At a council meeting this week, an alderman charged that the public works committee is not doing its job.

Ald. Ron McKinnon, who is a member of the North Cowichan committee, said that the committee, chaired by Alderman John Cannon is lacking in communication and regular meetings.

"I am embarrassed to be sitting on this committee," McKinnon said.

Public works chairman John Cannon said, "Communication was a two-way street."

"Every time you (McKinnon) have made a request it has been fulfilled," Cannon said.

McKinnon replied that there was a number of other aldermen who have expressed their displeasure with the way the committee operates, "but they won't view their feeling publicly."

Assistance stepped up

Student assistance programs have been stepped up by Education Minister Eileen Dailly to increase the ceiling to $3,300 from $2,900. The new program is based on a student's assessed need and combines a maximum of $1,500 in non-repayable student grants plus a Canada student loan of $1,800.

Animal protection officer

Board upholds dismissal

NANAIMO — A provincial arbitration board, which convened here late last month, this week reported that it has upheld the dismissal of Derek Roberts, former animal protection officer, by the Nanaimo branch of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

The society dismissed Roberts from his Nanaimo post after he submitted a bid to city council to operate pound services for the city.

The society said his bid was in competition to a bid the society, his employer, had submitted. He was dismissed on the grounds of a conflict of interest.

Members of the arbitration board were John C. Sherlock, chairman, John Horne, nominated by the society, and Joyce Leach, of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, who represented Roberts.

Nanaimo lawyer R. M. Hutchinson represented the society, and Tom Smith of CUPE represented Roberts.

A branch spokesman said Wednesday that a letter has been sent to Roberts and the Union, officially dismissing Roberts effective, Jan. 21, the date of the initial incident and the date Roberts' suspension from service was imposed.

Thirsty time here again

NANAIMO — A strike by brewery workers has brought this community back to where it was last year at this time — thirsty — and unable to do much about it.

Liquor stores in this area are selling out of beer almost as fast as they get it in and sales of beer by the case through hotel outlets are almost a thing of the past.

A spokesman for the liquor control board here said the downtown liquor store received a shipment of bottled beer Thuesday morning and was sold out by 4 p.m.

Young scramblers share lead but Palmer shows old form

Bob Baun

MEDINAH, Ill. (AP) — A couple of young players scrambled into command and pro golf's one-time king, Arnold Palmer, put himself in strong position two shots back in Thursday's first round of the U.S. Open's diamond jubilee tournament.

Pat Fitzsimons, 24, propelled by his first competitive hole in one, and Tom Watson, 25, matched erratic 67s—four under par—for the lead in this chase for the most coveted of all golf's titles.

"I got some breaks," said Watson, who blew the 54-hole lead in this tournament a year ago. "I made the shots you have to make to win."

Jim Wiechers, a 30-year-old journeyman pro who has yet to win in nine years on the tour, had a 68 and was the only other player in the 150-man field of the world's best to lead the still-dynamic 45-year-old Palmer.

Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, the only Canadian in the competition, had a 76. Tom Nettles, former Canadian Football League player, shot an 80.

"I got charged up," said Palmer, whose two-under-par 69 brought repeated cries of joy from the massive gallery that slipped and slid in happy abandon over the muddy, haystrewn hills of Medinah.

"I'd like to have three more rounds just like it," said Palmer, who scored his last major triumph in 1964 and hasn't won anything on this continent in more than two years.

But while Palmer and the kids handled the tiny greens, the deep, wet, matted rough, and the long, shaggy fairways — they haven't been cut in three days — in their own, distinct fashions, some of the game's top names had their problems on the 7032 yards of rolling, tree-studded hills and valleys that make up Medinah.

Jack Nicklaus, determined to keep alive his grand-slam dream — the unaccomplished one-year sweep of all the world's major titles — had

Watson and Fitzsimmons each had a scramble, erratic effort. Palmer's was solid.

Popular ex-Leaf new Toro coach

TORONTO (CP) — Bobby Baun, star defenceman for 17 seasons in the National Hockey League, has signed a one-year agreement to coach Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association.

The 38-year-old, twice an NHL all-star, will assume his new duties immediately. He succeeds Bob Leduc, who took over from Billy Harris midway in the 1974-75 season.

"I stayed away from hockey for two years for a number of reasons," Baun said. "For one thing, I wanted to expand my farm operations. But, very importantly, I really wanted to get a better perspective of the hockey business."

Eileen Anderson sets repeat try

Eileen Anderson is in the finals against the medalist for the second straight year in th eVictoria and District women's golf championship.

The Royal Colwood member, who lost to Glen Meadow's Dale Shaw last year and was a finalist in 1966, meets Gorge Vale's Dorothy DeGirolamo in today's championship flight final at Glen Meadows.

Mrs. Anderson earned the final berth with a 3 and 2 victory over host course-hopeful Dianne Desnoyer at Glen Meadows Wednesday. Mrs. DeGirolamo, who won the championship in 1966 — the last time it was held at Glen Meadows — erned the other berth with a 2-up victory over clubmate Shirley Naysmith.

In the consolation flight, Royal Colwood's Doreen Brunsdon, who defeated Flo McIntyre of Gorge Vale on the 19th hole, plays Gorge Vale's Jean Smith, who also posted a 19th-hole victory — over Bea Breffitt of Uplands.

Connors ousted

NOTTINGHAM, England (AP) — Wimbledon favorite Jimmy Connors of the United States was beaten in the quarter-finals of a $108,000 international tennis tournament Thursday as two other seeds also fell by the wayside.

Connors was defeated by compatriot Roscoe Tanner, 7-5, 6-3, as players struggled to familiarize themselves with grass courts.

Also out of contention after the quarter-finals were 1974 Canadian Open champion Guillermo Vilas of Argentina and American Arthur Ashe, seeded No. 2 and 3 here.

Vilas seemed troubled by the grass court and he went down, 4-6, 6-2, 7-5, to Australian Phil Dent while Ashe was toppled, 6-3, 6-4, by Australian veteran Tony Roche.

U.S. golfer wins

HOYLAKE, England (CP) — Carol Semple of the United States three-putted on the final green and had to settle for a triple tie for first place in the Newmark women's international golf tournament Thursday.

Miss Semple, 26, shared the top spot with South Africa's Alison Sheard and Dinah Henson of Britain, all with 301 totals. The American, who led throughout the tournament, missed on a 10-foot putt on the final green and had to settle for a 78 in both of Friday's rounds.

Miss Sheard had a 75 and 76 in the final rounds, while her British rival had a 76 and 77.

Debbie Savoy of Montreal was the top Canadian with a 311 total after successive scores of 79 in the third and fourth rounds. Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver had rounds of 78 and 82 Friday for 313, while Dale Shaw of Victoria wound up with a 317 total, which included final rounds of 85 and 78.

Girl gains fall in court ruling

DETROIT (UPI) — Before challenging the state wrestling champion, eight-year-old Patricia McNaughton had to whip the National Amateur Athletic Union.

A federal court ruling gave her the first fall against the AAU and Patricia was confident she could do as well on the wrestling mat.

The 45-pound youngster, who has defeated boys her own age in 38 of 46 matches, filed suit to challenge the AAU's ban of female participation in contact sports.

Her attorneys argued Thursday that since the AAU National tournament is scheduled at the fieldhouse of Eastern Michigan University, a public institution, it must observe federal antidiscrimination laws.

U.S. district judge John Feikens agreed.

In a preliminary ruling, Feikens said officials must let Patricia wrestle if they want to hold the tournament at EMU.

Bored by the two-hour court hearing, Patricia predicted victory in the tournament, saying she can beat the defending state champ in her class.

WHA clubs strip dead franchises

TORONTO (CP) — The World Hockey Association picked the bones of two defunct franchises Thursday as its 14 surviving clubs divided up 56 players made available by the collapse of Baltimore Blades and Chicago Cougars.

Ben Hatskin of Winnipeg, the league's chief executive officer, heaved a sigh of relief after presiding over the draft.

All but three or four of the players who belonged to the Blades and Cougars were picked up, relieving the league of responsibility for paying them for the remainder of their current contracts.

Hatskin explained that after three rounds of drafting the remaining players were put up for auction, with the WHA agreeing to pay the difference between the auction and contract figures.

"Our clubs co-operated and they have strengthened themselves for next year," Hatskin said, adding that "it will be a better league."

Denver Spurs, just admitted to the league, was given the first choice in both the draft of Chicago and Baltimore players and the intra-league draft which followed.

The Spurs picked Barry Legge, a 20-year-old Winnipeg-born defenceman, from the Baltimore list and later took another defenceman, Brian Gibbons, from Toronto Toros. Gibbons, six-foot-three and 190 pounds, is a 27-year-old native of St. John's who knocked around the minors for three seasons after finishing his junior hockey career in Hamilton.

Pat Stapleton, who as playing-coach of the Cougars has a contract that specifies he is required to play only in Chicago, was drafted by Indianapolis Racers, the second choice in the first round.

Stapleton was not immediately available for comment on whether he would agree to join the Racers.

Edmonton Oilers took goalie Dave Dryden, older brother of Ken Dryden of Montreal Canadiens from Chicago and immediately announced he had been signed.

A number of drafted players are still under contract to National Hockey League teams.

Cleveland Crusaders took Gil Perreault, the brilliant Buffalo centre, Minnesota Fighting Saints drafted Ross Lonsberry of Philadelphia Flyers, Quebec Les Nordiques took Don Saleski, another Flyer, and Houston Aeros, the WHA champions, drafted Dave Forbes of Boston Bruins, all from the Baltimore protected list.

The WHA rights to Jim Pappin, now with the California Golden Seals of the NHL, were taken by Cincinnati Stingers who will make their first appearance as a team next season although awarded a franchise several years ago. And the rights to Jim Watson, the Flyers defenceman, were taken by Quebec from the Chicago list.

Also selected were members of the Soviet national team—Boris Mihailov and Vladimir Petrov by Edmonton Oilers and Alexander Gusev by Phoenix Roadrunners. But there is no indication that the teams involved have any real hope of signing the Russians.

Wins stream for Catfish

Jim "Catfish" Hunter is doing what he's supposed to, and doing it very well.

On Thursday, the husky starter retired the first 17 batters and finished with an eight-hitter as the Yankees whipped the Tigers, 9-2, in an American League game at Detroit.

The victory was Hunter's eighth in his last 10 decisions, it boosted his record to 10-6, and it made him the fourth American League pitcher to reach 10 victories.

Vida Blue of Oakland Athletics, Nolan Ryan of California Angels and Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles are the others.

Hunter was helped by the return of outfielder Roy White, who drove in five runs with a home run and single.

But the Yankees, who already have regular outfielders Bobby Bonds and Elliott Maddox out with leg injuries, lost the services of rookie-centre fielder Kerry Dineen, who pulled a hamstring muscle while running the bases in the fifth inning.

The Tigers' first baserunner was Tom Veryzer, who hit a home run with two out in the sixth inning.

In the National League, gary Carter's bases-loaded infield hit scored pitcher Dale Murray with the winning run in the 13th inning to give Montreal Expos a 3-2 win over visiting ew York Mets.

The victory was the Expos eighth in their last nine games.

Murray led off the inning with a base-on-balls, and advanced on a sacrifice bunt. Mike Jorgensen was intentionally walked and Tony Scott singled to load the bases.

Carter hit the ball in the direction of shortstop Mike Phillips, who couldn't come up with it in time to make a play.

NEW WESTMINSTER — Fatigue and Bill Mosdell caught up with the Victoria Shamrocks Thursday n ight at Shamrocks Thursday night at

Playing their second game in as many nights, Victoria squandered a chance to move into a second-place tie in the Western Lacrosse association by losing 15-9, to the defending-champion New Westminster Salmonbellies. The victory boosted the Salmonbellies into a first place tie with idle Vancouver Burrards.

Bill Mosdell and Wayne Goss scored a pair of short-handed goals late in the second period to wipe out a 5-4 Shamrock lead, and the Bellies coasted home with seven consecutive goals in the final period.

Victoria's George Grover was lifted after the 14th goal at 10:05, giving way to junior Al Radley, who was subbing for suspended Skip Chapman.

Mosdell finished with four goals, while Wayne Goss and Walt Weaver both had two goals and four assists. Paul Parnell also scored twice, and Dave Matheson, Steve D'Easum, Gord Jung, Rick Kennedy, and Ian Kennedy scored once.

Pete Rushton scored two goals for Victoria. Ranjit Dillon, Bob Turkington, Jeevan Dillon, Charn Dhillon, Tom Somner, Jim Browne and Jerry Kustaski all scored once.

The teams were deadlocked at 2-2 after one period, and the Shamrocks trailed 6-7 after two periosds. The Shamrocks were repeatedly stymied by New Westminster goalie Skip Jolly who finished with 35 stops. Grover and Radley combined to block 47.

Shamrocks were again without high-scoring Ron MacNeil, unable to make most games away from home because of work commitments, and had Vern Black in uniform for the first time in four years.

Cheery games report

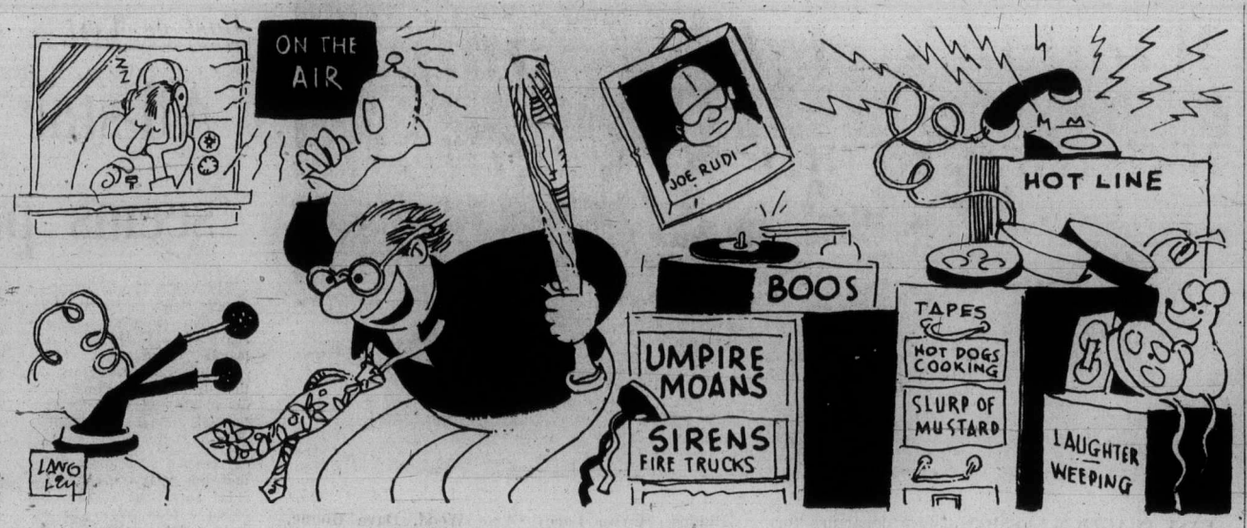
MONTREAL (CP) — Work at the Olympic site can be considered to be on schedule and more workers are being hired following cuts after a two-week strike in May, a spokesman for the Montreal Urban Community said Thursday.

Jacques Delisle said the latest figures he had showed there were more than 1900 workers on the job at the stadium-swimming pool complex and the Velodrome.

"The work force at the sites was cut back to about 1200 workers after the May strike," he said. "Productivity during the last few weeks has been so good I guess I would be safe in saying that we have managed to make up time we lost during the strike."

The Olympic site was closed for 14 days after construction workers walked off the job May 8 to protest provincial government legislation, since passed, placing four construction unions under trusteeship.

All the men were fired and an elaborate screening system was set up when the work stoppage ended to prevent men the contractors considered "trouble-makers" from being rehired.



Old broadcast art not quite extinct lone holdout carries on in W Evansville

By ROSS ATKIN
(Christian Science Monitor)

(Christian Science Monitor)

Marv Bates is probably the only man in the country who can broadcast a baseball game locked in a radio station hundreds of miles away from the ballpark — and make it sound like he's there.

Bates stands alone as the master of broadcast reconstruction, a skill he has developed during 12 seasons.

This art was fairly commonplace 30 years ago, but now is virtually extinct. In fact, the voice of Evansville's minor league Triplets (a farm team of the Detroit Tigers) has done some investigating — he called major league baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn among others — and discovered he is the only known sportscaster still reconstructing games.

Marv's first exposure to the craft came in 1949 when he recreated 123 major league games without seeing a single pitch.

In those days the play-by-play was translated out of Morse Code by a Western Union operator and delivered as typewritten copy to the studio. Now, in broadcasting Triplet away games from station WGFB, game action is received over the telephone. Sports writers in the other American Association cities — Tulsa, Oklahoma City, Indianapolis, Des Moines, Wichita, Omaha, and Denver — supply the detailed information. Then it's up to Bates to bring it to life.

This is done using more than 50 sound effects recorded on seven different machines. All are authentic sounds (recorded "on location") which heighten the sense of realism.

"I used to get bored sitting in a dead studio," Bates explains, "so I started adding more and more sound effects to the reconstructions. I've got hot dog and soft drink vendors, the public address announcer paging a doctor, and PA announcements about the 'lucky number for tonight.' "

"Altogether I've spent well over 750 hours in the control room to get the sound effects I have today. One tape, more than an hour long, includes nothing but bat cracks."

One of the most valuable tapes in the audio arsenal is of sustained crowd noise. This is not cheering, but the general hubbub that's heard between pitches. It's what Bates says keeps the broadcast from sounding like it came out of a barrel. What makes this noise hard to record in a pure form are the inevitable interruptions — organ music, public address announcements, etc.

Having heard several reconstructed broadcasts, this reporter can vouch for their realism. Like many others in the listening audience, I once believed they were live, on-the-scene accounts.

The broadcasts are done on a delayed basis. The reconstruction of a game which starts at 7:30 originates from the WGFB studio at 8:15.

Here is Marv's working schedule:

"I call the park at 7:20 to get the starting lineups, names of the umpires, a weather report, the expected crowd size, and the batting averages and RBI totals of the team the Triplets are playing. Later during the broadcast, I adjust the volume on the crowd noise based on the crowd estimate.

At 8 p.m. Bates calls again to get a pitch-by-pitch description of the game's first 30 minutes of action. When he has only a half inning of game action left to broadcast, a station assistant will make another call to get caught up on what has transpired since the 8 p.m. conversation. Even though there is a 45-minute time delay in beginning the broadcast, Bates usually makes up time and finishes the reconstruction only 10 minutes late.

The reason Bates is studio-bound is financial. Its too costly to pick up a minor league sportscaster's tab — room, board, and travel — for the lengthy season.

Lake Hill pairing takes cup

Cec Farles and Francine Landers won the Baker Cup by beating the champions in the final of the women's scotch doubles tournament Thursday at Vic West Lawn Bowling Club.

The Lake Hill pair scored a 20-12 win over 1974 champions Hilda Douglas and Helen Holmberg of the host club.

Bea Gavin and Helda Harper of Victoria Club finished third, while the 1974 "B" champions, Jesse Kinneard and Flora Martin of Burnside were fourth.

This year's "B" winners were Leona Peterson and Ivi McLeod of Burnside. They scored a 19-10 win over Nora Row and Ann McKeaver of Canadian Pacific in the final.

Edmonton named host city for junior B boxla final

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada's first national Junior B lacrosse championship will be held in Edmonton Sept. 4-7, John Tobias of Ottawa, national director of the Canadian Lacrosse Association, said Thursday.

The championship, part of an association program to boost interest in lacrosse across the country, will involve representatives from each province, said Tobias, and will be second only to the Minto Cup Junior A competition in significance.

Tobias said the concentration on lacrosse in the Prairies, where the game has not been popular for several years, is based on the decision of the Commonwealth Games Foundation to stage a demonstration of the sport here in 1978.

In recent years, Canadian lacrosse interest has centred in Ontario and British Columbia. There have been signs of growth in Quebec and Nova Scotia.

Tobias also said 16 teams from across Canada will play in Calgary Aug. 27-31 in midget competition.

The news conference was told Montreal Quebecois of the NLL is considering a series of games in Western Canada next season when the club is forced out of its headquarters for six weeks during the Olympics.

Learning about outdoors

COURTENAY — Three of the 31 students at Lake Trail junior high school who have successfully completed the ten-week conservation and outdoor recreation conservation course, received their diplomas this week from course instructor Larry Peterson.

The three students are Russell Wear, Larry Simpson and Allan Kolenovsky.

Lake Trail is the only school in the district, and one of the few schools in the province teaching the course.

Peterson, a teacher at the school, hopes that next term he will be able to offer the course to about 60 students.

The course is divided into six sections dealing with outdoor ethic, gun handling and hunter safety, regulations, animal and bird identification, survival and first aid.

Peterson said considerable emphasis is placed on hunter attitude. This include attitude towards other hunters, property owners, regulations, gun safety, respect and consideration for other members of the hunting fraternity.

Special commission

Ney names last member

NANAIMO — Mayor Frank Ney has named the last member to his administrative procedures commission.

The commission was formed last weekend by the mayor to make recommendations on how to streamline procedures relating to the processing of applications for developments and rezoning.

Builders and businessmen complained last week that Nanaimo was losing out in housing and commercial and industrial development because of delays in processing development applications. Those that were getting approved, the groups said, were subject to much higher than anticipated costs because of the time loss — sometimes up to a year.

Named to the commission Tuesday was Nanaimo contractor Bob Jeffs, who will represent the Mid-Island Home Builders Association.

He joines city employees Dave Wilson, Howard Nicholson, and Art Leynard, along with regional planner Bill McKay, water and sewer commissioner A. W. McDonald, Don Rawlins of the chamber of commerce J. M. Smythie of the Surveyors Association, and Dean Findlayson, president of the Vancouver Island Real Estate Board.

Ney says the commission will begin it's study immediately.

Charge laid after chase

NANAIMO — A 21-year-old Coquitlam man, Martin Kent of 1975 Hillside, was remanded until next Monday when he appeared in provincial court Wednesday, charged with criminal negligence in the operation of a motor vehicle.

He was charged in connection with a high-speed chase in the city at 3 a.m. Wednesday.

Police said officers on patrol attempted to stop a car for a routine check on Vancouver Avenue but, instead of stopping, the vehicle left the scene at high speed.

The car was followed onto Terminal Avenue, northbound. The car was next seen southbound on Terminal Avenue on the wrong side of the road. As it passed the police vehicle, police said the car rammed the passenger's door, catching Const. Ken Guisborn between the door and the body of the car. He suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Continuing south, the vehicle then turned off on Terminal on to Townsite Rd. where, police said, the chase vehicle was travelling at 100 miles per hour and was still unable to catch the fleeing car.

The chase ended at theintersection of Townsite and Bowen Road when the chased car went out of control and struck a power pole. The two occupants escaped without serious injury.

Guisborn was treated in hospital for his injuries and released.

Judge Stan Wardill set bail for Kent at $1,500.

Canada giving $10 million

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will make another $10 million available for relief and rehabilitation aid in Southeast Asia, for a total of almost $17 million pledged since March.

The Canadian International Development Agency said the money will be spent for work in South Vietnam, Laos and, if requested Cambodia.

Modest goals set for summer season of Phoenix troupe

By JIM GIBSON
Colonist Reporter

The Phoenix Summer Theatre doesn't intend to rival Stratford or other summer festivals across the country.

That's not the mandate of the University of Victoria summer company, according to its co-artistic directors John Krich and Harvey Miller who pilot the theatre through a 29-performance repertory season of comedy starting next Friday.

"It's summer theatre for the community and hopefully some tourists will come by," Miller said in an interview.

Krich, who helped create the company in 1972 to fill he summertime theatre gap left by Victoria Fair ,sets modest goals for his summer theatre's future growth.

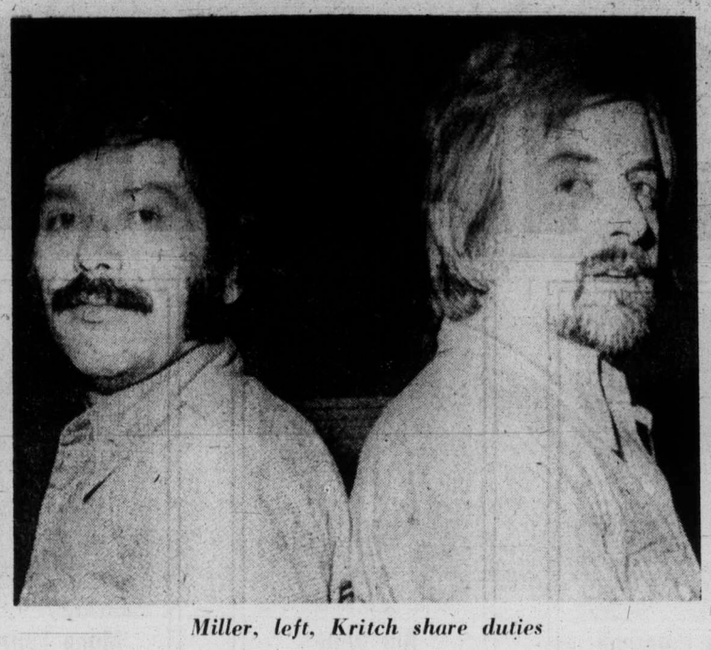
"I'd like to see it become a recognized summer event in Victoria," Krich said. But to do this would require hiring more experienced people, particularly in the technical end, along with a visiting artist for the season.

"I've no grandiose ideas about it; I'm not going to get another Stratford," Krich said.

And certainly, looking at the company's $22,000 budget from the province and mostly the university for the three productions in the 140-seat theatre, the company's scope is locked in by its bank account.

All but $3,000 of the budget goes to pay the 15 theatre department students who make up the company. Apart from Krich and Miller who receive salaries comparable with the rest of the summer session teaching staff, the going wage is only $65 a week.

"We lose some good kids because they just can't affort to come for the summer," Krich said.



Miller, left, Kritch share duties

Even with the 11 volunteer company members, it still means that everyone must wear more than one hat.

As rehearsals ended Wednesday for What the Butler Saw, the season's first production, Jo Luke Krempasky stepped out of her actress role to tell the rest of the cast to "hang up their own costume." She designed them as well as those for the Woody Allen comedy, Play It Again, Sam, opening July 2.

Krich acts under Miller's direction in Butler and the roles are reversed in Broadway opening July 8.

The choice of plays for the season is certain to generate more box office support than the winter season when community tastes play second fiddle to what is experimental and intriguing for the theatre students.

But Krich and Miller insist that the straight season of light and black comedy was unintentional. Each director — Tony Bancroft directs the Allen comedy — offered a list of good plays and when all the hassles and hopes were cleared away only comedies remained.

Last season's sell-out Neil Simon comedy, The Last of the Red ot Lovers, may have influenced the artistic directors.

"A sell-out helps when you look at the box office and you have the university looking over your shoulder," Miller said, adding: "We do pick the season with an eye on what will get the people in."

Synod reappoints insemination study

QUEBEC (CP) — The general synod of the Anglican Church of Canada Tuesday decided to reappoint its task force on human life to continue a study of issues related to artificial insemination by donor (AID).

The synod gave the committee one year to complete its work and report findings to the church membership.

The committee has spent 18 months looking at moral problems involved with AID.

In a report to synod, the committee said the use of AID and embryo transfer "requires us to look hard at human nature and social institutions . . . and the moral values and theological reasoning which man must use in deciding what he may responsibly do."

Fahrenheit thermometer still popular

TORONTO (CP) — There is a heavy demand for thermometers with both Fahrenheat and Celsius scales marked on them, said Murray Duncan, general manager of the consumer products division at Taylor Instrument Companies of Canada Ltd.

He said the firm will sell more thermometers this year than last, but only one in eight thermometers sold have Celsius readings only.

Sales volume fell between Oct. 1, 1974, and April, 1975, because customers were reluctant to take thermometers in either Celsuis or fahrenheit, he said.

Although the firm stopped producing Fahrenheit thermometers last November, it has 25,000 of them in stock.

An official at Springfield Instrument Co. of Canada in Toronto said he expects an increase in sales, but no increase in profits because of the cost of converting Fahrenheit stock. The firm has a surplus of Fahrenheit stock valued at $80,000, including more than 5,000 thermometers.

Robert Harvey, a company director, said most thermometers sold are those which indicate both Celsius and Fahrenheit. Requests for units with Cedsius readings only have been one or two per cent of total demand.

Pierre Allard, sales manager at Thermometer Corp. of Canada in Montreal, said April sales were four times greater than usual.

"Sales in Fahrenheit dropped dead before April 1," he said, leaving the firm with $10,000 worth of old inventory. He said 90 per cent of all sales are those with both scales.

Robert Walker, general sales manager of the commercial department at Baker Instruments Ltd. in Toronto, said sales have been "exceptionally good for a time of year that is usually slow for thermometers," but added the over-all outlook is "far from pleasant."

"We can't get rid of Fahrenheit thermometers and nobody is going to compensate us for it."

He said the firm has $50,000 in unsold stock and the cost of converting Fahrenheit units to Celsius is between $5 and $10 each. Sales are evenly split between those giving both readings an dCelsius readings only.

Use lots of caution and suntan lotions

By BARBARA HERRERA
Colonist-Copley News Service

The season is upon us when the urge hits to bake in the sun in pursuit ofn that shimmery glow of sun-bronzed skin.

And down the beach comes galloping the nation's cosmetic industry brandishing trusty creams and lotions guaranteed to protect sunbathers from the distresses of burned, parched, wrinkled skin.

The confusion of advertising claims is enough to make a sun worshiper long for the old days when a mixture of iodine and baaby oil was considered sufficient protection from the strong rays.

But instead of retreating, skin-care experts are warning, it's better to arm yourself with knowledge about the sunburning process so you can sort out the products best for you.

What appears certain is that a great deal of caution and use of certain of these sun-protection preparations are healthful if this year's suntan is not to become next year's leathery, lined skin.

Sun damage to skin accumulates not only from day to day but from year to year.

Some dematologists warn some patients — especially women with fair, thin skin — not to sit in the sun at all. But if you are going to sunbathe, the key to the healthiest tan is in tanning slowly — slowly enough for the body's natural protection process to take over.

And, particularly for people with normal to dry skins, some extra protection with the advertised creams and lotions can be helpful.

In the suntanning process, the villain that burns your skin — the sun's ultraviolet rays — is also the hero that produces that healthy, golden glow of tan.

These ultraviolet rays coax a dark-toned pigment called melanin from the lower layers of your skin, where it's produced, to the top layer, where it builds up. As melanin accumulates it forms a natural protective shield against damage from further exposure to ultraviolet radiations. It also creates a rich, dark tone — what we call suntan.

But the problems occur when ultraviolet rays reach skin that's not protected by a shield of melanin pigment or at least by a coat of ultraviolet-ray-screening lotion.

Exposure to the sun gradually — from 10 minutes to an hour a day, depending on your natural skin tone — allows time for melanin to build up slowly and naturally without damaging the skin. It's generally easiest for naturally dark-complexioned people.

The alternative to a nasty burn — and its accumulative aging effects — lies in caution. Here are some tips:

- Be most careful in the sun between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m., when the rays are strongest (some skin-care authorities frown on any sunning during these hours, especially for fair, thin-skinned people.).
- Sun tanning should be a process of building up pigmentation an hour at a time (or much less for fair-skinned people). The more slowly you build your own tan, the longer it will last. Too much sun makes skin overproduce a layer of cells that flakes or peels off quickly, taking your tan with it.
- Never lie out in the sun for four, five or six hours. It's as readily as lighter skin but too much too fast.
it does darken, and can even burn, in the sun.
- When applying lotions, backs of knees and neck. Reapply after going in the remember tips of ears, feet.
- Black skin doesn't burn water.
- People with oily skin can overdo it with the creams and should never use a greasy suntan cream or oil.
- Cover your hair in the sun if your hair is bleached or colored. The sun can react with chemicals to turn your gorgeous blonde to tattletale orange.
- Certain drugs such as antibiotics, diuretics and some tranquilizers can cause skin to become more sensitive to the sun's rays. Check with your doctor.
- If you get a sunburn with skin blisters, pain, headache and faintness, you may have second-degree burns and a visit to a doctor is recommended.

Nonbreathing spells studied

SEATTLE (UPI) — Crib death researchers have zeroed in on nonbreathing periods experienced by children and adults alike during sleep and are very close to understanding the mysterious infant killer, according to a pioneer in study of the disease.

Dr. J. Bruce Beckwith, pathologist at Children's Orthopedic Hospital here, said those nonbreathing spells, called apnea, now represent the principal focus of crib death research.

Beckwith is a member of the board of medical advisors to the National Foundation for Sudden Infant Death and, in 1965, conducted the original research program on the disease known officially as Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

He said in an interview that several research projects now going on around the country are directed at a relatively infrequent type of apnea, called obstructive apnea. This phenomenon involves collapse of the throat muscles and results in blockage of the upper respiratory passage.

But Beckwith cautioned against the temptation on the part of parents to look to monitoring devices which would warn of apneac spells.

"I strongly suspect," he said, "that a child experiencing a spell which is going to prove lethal could not be resuscitated, even if a person were immediately available to attempt revival."

Beckwith said researchers have long known that apnea occurred in infants, "although for a long time we thought it occurred only in premature infants.

"Recent studies, however, indicate that rather long periods of apnea, up to 30 seconds, are experienced by a large percentage of normal, healthy babies," he added.

36,000 making strike decision

By WARREN CARAGATA
Colonist Reporter

About 36,000 forest, fishing, food retailing and hospital workers are taking strike votes in B.C. this week.

About 2,000 members of the Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America will complete their vote this week and the ballots will be counted at the weekend, Roger Lewis, IWA Local 1-118 president, said Thursday night. The other 30,000 members of the coast region of the IWA will finish their votes by the end of next week.

George Johnston, business manager of Local 212 of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers, said Thursday about 800 meatcutters employed by Safeway, Super-Valu, Shop-Easy and independent food stores will finish their vote today and the ballots will be counted either today or Monday.

About 2,500 paramedics represented by the Health Sciences Association employed in 81 B.C. hospitals started taking a strike vote Thursday, and 600 tendermen, members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union will be voting until Wednesday on whether to authorize a strike. Another 2,000 shoreworkers in the fishing industry will vote Wednesday on possible job action.

Lewis said the crucial point in forest industry negotiations will come today when the IWA and the Forest Industrial Relations meet with provincial mediator Fred Geddes. The IWA has asked for an increase of $1 an hour in a one-year contract.

"There is absolutely no movement on the part of the industry. They are provoking things at this stage," Lewis said.

Police believe bandits fled in plane or copter

$1 million Quebec bank heist

Colonist Wire Services

BAIE COMEAU, Que. — A Quebec Provincial Police spokesman in this community, 220 miles northeast of Quebec City, said Thursday police recovered a car used in a $1.06 million bank holdup Thursday morning.

"We recovered the getaway car, a black 1967 Chrysler, about 30 miles from here," he said.

"We have no further clues, though, and we don't expect any arrests for the time being."

It was believed to be the largest bank robbery in Quebec in more than a decade.

The police said earlier three masked men armed with machine guns burst into a branch of Bank Canadian National, at the Manic 3 hydro-electric dam site 50 miles north of here and fled with the money.

"We're pretty sure now the bandits used a plane or helicopter to escape and we've alerted various airports in the area to watch out for them.

"There are 35 to 40 men on the case from the QPP and two municipal forces," he said. "We also expect a QPP helicopter and police dogs to arrive soon."

Police sealed off roads within a 50-mile radius of the holdup and were searching cars at roadblocks.

A police spokesman said earlier the bank's manager and assistant manager were taken hostage by the thieves but were released about 10 miles from the scene of the holdup.

The stolen money was part of a payroll for more than 2,500 Hydro-Quebec employees working at the site.

Police could not say how many employees were in the bank at the time of the robbery and bank officials could not be reached, but no shots were fired and no one was hurt.

A spokesman said the suspects were last seen heading south towards Baie Comeau along a road following the west bank of the Manicouagan River.

Montreal police said the loot taken in the robbery was the most stolen in Quebec since a Montreal bank was robbed of the same amount about a decade ago.

Two weeks ago, bandits drilled into a safety-deposit vault and looted deposit boxes at Lachine, Que. Police believe the robbers took close to $1 million but the exact amount has not been determined.

Queen sends general to Amin

LONDON (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth dispatched a personal messenger to President Idi Amin of Uganda Thursday night in an 11th-hour appeal for the life of a British lecturer facing execution in the East African nation.

The Briton, Dennis Hills, 61, is to go before a firing squad Saturday after conviction of treason. He described Amin in the unpublished manuscript of a book as "a village tyrant."

A Buckingham Palace spokesman said British Army Lt.-Gen. Chandos Blair flew to Kampala with a "personal message from the queen in her role as head of the Commonwealth."

Blair, 56, currently serves with the army's Scottish Command. He was Amin's commanding officer 16 years ago when the Ugandan leader was a member of a British Army unit known as the King's African Rifles.

On the East African Airways flight with Blair was Hills' 15-year-old son Hanson, who said he hoped to visit his father in his death-row cell in Kampala.

Amin also demanded a number of concessions from Britain as his price for sparing the Briton's life. These included supplying military spare parts to Uganda, expelling Ugandan exiles from Britain and stopping what he called "malicious propaganda" emanating from Britain.

Motorcyclist pushes bike against howling clouds of sand near Palm Springs

Cars sandblasted for fourth day

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Driving winds and whirling sands described as "the worst storm in 20 years" whipped through the desert for the fourth straight day Thursday, plaguing motorists who ignored warnings to stay off the highways.

"The winds are still blowing and people who drive the highways can expect to have their cars damaged," said Deidre Woods of the Southern California Automobile Club.

"But some people keep travelling, people who don't live here and don't know how vicious the wind can be. I keep telling them it's bad, but they ask if they can drive anyway. I tell them the roads are open but they have to travel at their own risk."

The main highway near this resort town, Interstate 10, was closed for several hours Tuesday night and Wednesday when winds up to 90 miles per hour piled sand headlight high around cars and stranded hundreds of motorists.

The winds abated somewhat on Wednesday and the highway was reopened to drivers willing to take the risk. Interstate 15, the main freeway between Los Angeles and Las Vegas, Nev., also reopened Wednesday despite continued winds that threatened to leave motorists stranded.

"We've had 300 calls in the past two days," an auto club dispatcher in Palm Springs said Thursday, "and it's only dropping off a little today."

"Most of the cars get stalled from sand in the carburator, or else the windshields get pitted so bad they can't see even though the cars still run.

"We had some overturned trucks too. There were a few cars where the wind blew out the window, and some cars stranded overnight had the paint stripped off right down to the metal. It's unreal."

Indication in Monday's budget

8-cent fuel hike likely

OTTAWA (CP) — Price increases this year for gasoline, home-heating fuel and natural gas probably will be indicated in the federal budget Monday.

Signs point to an increase of eight cents a gallon for gasoline and heating oil.

Although no estimates have been released officially on new prices for crude oil and natural gas to producers, most government and industry sources say they expect an increase of $2 a barrel on oil and one of 20 cents to 30 cents a thousand cubic feet on natural gas.

That would increase the price of gasoline and home-heating fuel by eight cents a gallon and raise the annual natural gas bill of an average homeowner by between $30 and about $45. Such an increase would add $1.5 billion annually to consumer spending.

Ottawa says higher prices are needed to encourage a search for more oil and natural gas in the face of reports that Canada will be short of petroleum in the 1980s.

The industry says it needs both higher prices and some cuts in the tougher resource taxes imposed by Ottawa on them last year.

The industry says that even with a $2 increase for a barrel of oil, now $6.50, companies would lack enough money to step up exploration programs.

They say they hope for some changes in the budget.

"I can't believe Ottawa intends to maintain the exisiting taxes," said a spokesman for the Canadian Petroleum Association. "But there have been no signs of a reduction."

Imperial Oil Ltd. and Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. say the consumer will benefit little from the anticipated increase in crude prices. There would be little money for exploration.

Gulf President Jerry MacAfee estimates that if taxes are unchanged, the companies would get three cents from a

Oil, gas reserves guess plummets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government geologists slashed their estimates of America's Atlantic offshore oil riches by a dramatic 80 per cent Thursday and said the entire nation may have only a third the undiscovered oil and gas resources thought to exist a year ago.

In a detailed report to the Federal Energy Administration, the U.S. Geological Survey said the untapped Atlantic frontier out to a depth of about 650 feet may contain only 2 to 4 billion barrels of oil instead of the 10 to 20 billion estimated in 1974.

For all of the nation's offshore areas, the report showed, estimates of oil resources have been cut from last year's 65 to 130 billion barrels to a much more conservative 10 to 49 billion.

Onshore oil estimates, it showed, now stand at 37 to 80 billion barrels instead of the 135 to 270 billion reported in 1974.

Similar reductions also were made for undiscovered natural gas reserves.

Two lab dogs smoked out

LONDON (AP) — A group of animal lovers said Wednesday it freed two dogs from a laboratory where they were being forced to smoke cigarettes in the search for a cancer-free tobacco substitute. An anonymous caller who telephoned a domestic news agency said one of the dogs wheezed "like a human being who has smoked for 30 years." Imperial Chemical Industries acknowledged that the dogs had disappeared from their kennels.

Leftists jeer at church HQ

Troops aid Catholics

Colonist Wire Services

LISBON — Heavily armed soldiers standing shoulder to shoulder cleared a path through a mob of angry leftists Thursday to let more than 120 Roman Catholic clerics, nuns and laymen escape from the church headquarters where they had been besieged for 17 hours.

Several hundred leftists, some wielding sticks, jeered "Fascists! Fascists!" as the Catholics were loaded aboard canvas-covered army trucks on the sun-drenched Square of the Martyrs.

Antonio Cardinal Ribeiro, the patriarch of Lisbon and the country's ranking prelate, and the other Catholics were chased inside the building Wednesday night by thousands of leftists wielding sticks.

The Catholics had been protesting the takeover of a church-owned radio station by Communist workers and the leftists — who accuse the church of having supported the former right-wing dictatorship — called a counter-demonstration.

The leftists smashed windows and burned a car. On the shell they put a sign: "This car belonged to a priest who worked for the secret police."

Heavily armed police surrounded the building and some of the Catholics escaped Thursday morning. But most refused to leave until the army brought covered trucks to protect them from the mob.

Indian wives seek police shield

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Indian Homemakers Association of B.C. has asked for police protection for some delegates to the group's annual conference in Richmond, association president Rose Charlie said Thursday.

She said in an interview she is arranging protection for women who spoke out at the conference against the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs' policy of rejecting government funds.

No incidents occurred at the conference, which ended Thursday, but some delegates said they were concerned about their safety when they returned to their home reserves.

An RCMP spokesman in Richmond said Mrs. Charlie has written an official note to the police.

"We are certainly acting to assess it and will provide assistance if required," said the spokesman.

Irene Harris of Chemainus said in an interview the band office was broken into Wednesday and files taken.

She also said some members on her reserve had accused her of using band funds for the conference and she expected to face further accusations when she gets home.

Agnes Dick of the Sheshat band at Port Alberni and Mrs. Harris both said at the conference the Indian leaders are putting children in the front lines to force a settlement on land claims by rejecting government aid.

Mrs. Dick said the conference was intimidated by Indian leaders and that those bands which wish to continue government funding are harassed.

"I have nothing against the land-claim issue," Mrs. Dick said Thursday. "But the people who are pushing it don't consult the majority."

Instant village may nestle at mouth of Tod Inlet

A quiet 200-acre woodland at the mouth of Salmon-rich Tod Inlet — near Butchart Gardens in Central Saanich — may become the bustling hub of an instant village by the mid-1980s.

The British American Cement Manufacturers' Development Corp. (BACM) has told Central Saanich council and the Saanich school board that Tod Inlet is the site it has selected for development of an 850-to-900-home village, complete with a 150-berth marina and other commercial and recreational facilities.

BACM is a subsidiary of the Winnipeg-based company, Genstar, and officials of the company have told council their proposal also calls for dyking Tod Inlet across its upper end, from a point about 500 feet west of the mouth of Tod Creek.

The Saanich Peninsula municipal council first met, informally, with BACM officials in March.

School board staff met with company officers last week to discuss provision of schools to service the proposed development, which could accommodate between 2,700 and 3,000 residents.

The residents would live in single-family homes, condominiums and other multiple-family structures.

The site chosen for the development proposal lies just east of Butchart Gardens, extending south to the Saanich municipal line.

The authors of the plan — now in the hands of the Vancouver planning firm preparing a 20-year community plan for Central Saanich — have anticipated objections to the proposed development.

"Concerns may ... arise over dyking of the upper end of the inlet, but such objections could be allayed through the provision of a public park fronting Tod Creek ...", a booklet describing the proposal says.

But, the booklet continues, "one has to be concerned about the over-utilization of Tod Inlet as a public recreational resource — BACM considers that intensive general public usage should not be encouraged."

The developers, the booklet says, are considering the environmental impact of the project by planning for park areas and by preserving some of the steeper land in its natural state.

They are also counting on a public outcry.

The development would be "shaped by social and political pressures," the booklet says, describing the pressures as "powerful and vocal forces intent on maintaining the status quo (and which) are antagonistic to urban growth and to the alienation of a land possessing even a vestige of natural amenity."

One of those days that attracts visitors to Victoria — clear sky, sunshine, Olympic Mountains looming across the strait, and just enough breeze to fill the sails of a Fireball — drew Victorians Ken Inkman and Roger Hind to waters off Oak Bay Marina Thursday.

'Yes' vote by CUPE in Saanich

Members of the Saanich local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees voted 141-109 in favor of accepting a contract with that municipality at a meeting Thursday night, their business agent said.

"The contract is not a good one," Tom Smith told the Colonist, "and that was reflected at the meeting.

"The members are not happy with the package, or some parts of it, but it had to be put to them as a package ... and they accepted it as such."

The biggest single objection to the two-year contract, the union business agent said, was a controversial clause which requires the union to drop internal disciplinary charges against any member who was the subject of a complaint during the long lockout earlier this year.

"There's a lot of ill feeling" over the clause, Smith said, but he would not specify what charges had been pending against a union member.

"Many of the members feel management is interfering with the union's business as a result of it."

That ill-feeling is bound to carry over to the job, he added, and may create unpleasant working conditions in some sectors.

The 375 members of the local — inside and outside workers for the area's largest municipality — accepted a contract package which is similar, in most respects, to those which gave workers in Victoria, Oak Bay, the Capital Region District and the Greater Victoria school district raises of between 26 and 34.5 per cent.

There are some minor differences, Smith said, including one which saw inside workers at the top of the salary scale in Saanich pare their demands to allow those in the middle of the scale to draw higher wages.

Other differences include the addition of severance pay, job classifications and working conditions.

The contract expires Dec. 31, 1976.

The agreement leaves only one CUPE local in the region still negotiating for a settlement.

Local 333, representing 82 inside and outside workers in Esquimalt, has yet to ratify an agreement with that municipality, Smith said.

The local will have to decide what its next step will be after the provincial Labor Relations Board hands down its decision on the legality of the lockout of the local's members by Esquimalt in February, the business agent added.

That decision is expected sometime next week.

Live-aboards berthed next to off-limit wharf

Ten people living aboard boats at VanIsle Marina in Sidney, next to the federal wharf from which other boat dwellers were evicted this spring, have yet to be told to abandon their moorings.

More than 15 people lived on boats moored at Fishermen's Wharf, a federal dock administered by the town, until they were ordered to leave in early April.

The live-aboards were told they were violating federal regulations which prohibit dumping garbage or wastes into the water, as well as a Sidney bylaw which requires boats with live-aboards to be connected to a sewage disposal system.

VanIsle manager Alan Dickinson said this week the live-aboards at his marina don't have a sewage hookup and probably dump their garbage in the water.

But the marina manger said he considered his live-aboards an asset, not a liability, and denied they are creating pollution by living on their boats.

A single gallon of gasoline dumped into the water would do more environmental damage than the boats, he said.

His claim was supported by Dick Stratton, of Northwest Biological Laboratories, who said his company grows sea urchins, starfish, sea lettuce and other marine life in holding tanks at the marina.

If the water were polluted, Stratton said, the animals in the tanks would have died long ago — and they have been thriving for months.

Dickinson said the live-aboards help curb vandalism and thefts at the marina because they act as unofficial watchmen.

Sidney town clerk Geoff Logan said Thursday the town's boat sewage bylaw was difficult to enforce.

In order to prove people are living aboard a boat, he said, the town would have to hire somebody to spy on the marina day and night for several days.

Logan also said all but one of the live-aboards at Fishermen's Wharf have left.

That one has decided to fight the eviction order in court.

Thousands ride on Marguerite

The Princess Marguerite carried 16,207 passengers between Seattle and Victoria between June 2 and June 16, Resources Minister Robert Williams told the Legislature Thursday.

In her first week on the Victoria-Port Angeles run she carried 3,537 between the two cities for a total passenger load of 19,744.

Williams said the Marguerite meant an extra $5 million to downtown Victoria merchants who would not have survived this summer without the tourist trade generated by the ferry service revived by the government after being abandoned by Canadian Pacific.

Knife victim 'fair'

A 17-year-old Victoria hotel busboy was reported in fair condition Thursday afternoon and a 19-year-old resident of a B.C. mainland community was charged in Victoria Provincial Court following a stabbing incident early in the day.

Victoria police said Frank Ross Ogilvie of 1009 Carberry Gardens, a busboy at the Wilson Inn, 856 Blanshard, was at first reported in critical condition in hospital with a knife wound in his right abdomen but showed improvement later in the day.

Glenn Scott Kelly of Maple Ridge was charged with causing bodily harm with intent to wound Ogilvie by stabbing him with a knife. After a short discussion by prosecutor Nicholas Lang and Legal Aid duty counsel Brock Emberton, Judge Douglas Campbell remanded the case to today for further hearing.

Police said they were called to the Wilson Inn shortly after 2:20 a.m., recovered a pocket knife with a three-inch blade and found a suspect hiding under a car in the Inn parking lot.

The stabbing incident occurred on the parking lot and police gave few details. Other sources said the suspect and one or two other persons had been drinking inside and had either left or gone outside for air. The busboy went outside and an argument began.

Workshop set on potential

An all-day workshop on developing personal potential will be held from 9 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Saturday in Room 107, MacLaurin Building, University of Victoria, by the Greater Victoria Citizens Counselling Centre. Co-ordinators Roy and Mona Hundleby will conduct the workshop. Cost is $5 including supper. Participants will bring their own lunch. Registration may be made at 592-1566.

Holiday hours include tours

Provincial government offices will be closed Tuesday, July 1, the Dominion Day holiday. The Provincial Museum will be open to the public from 10 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. on that date and guided tours of the Legislative Buildings will be conducted from 10 a.m. to 7:30 p.m.

In China, all work for betterment of state

And idleness is unheard of today

Imagine physically and mentally handicapped people manufacturing a million flashlight batteries a month.

Imagine schoolchildren improving their manual dexterity by folding cardboard boxes which hold 12 dozen flashlight batteries destined for export markets.

Imagine both activities taking place not for personal gain or satisfaction, but for the betterment of the state.

What you have is just one example of how the People's Republic of China has succeeded in integrating its society by using resources unavailable to Western nations.

The flashlight-manufacturing example was just one of many impressions gathered recently by A. J. Longmore, superintendent of schools for the Greater Victoria school district, during a 20-day tour of China.

Longmore was one of 20 educators from across Canada who went to China to study education methods in that country.

He related some of his findings to the Victoria Rotary Club at a luncheon Thursday in the Empress.

There is no idleness in Chinese society, according to Longmore.

Elementary schools have gardens where food is grown for elderly people.

Students in so-called middle schools, aged 12 to 18, attend classes for eight months a year.

For one month, each student must work in a factory, for another month, he must work in a commune, and the remaining two months he is on holidays.

There are no hard and fast curriculums in China, said Longmore.

Factories and communes are responsible for their own schools systems and medical services when they reach a certain size.

The state gives only guidelines, but local units decide on educational details.

Factory and commune committees decide who goes to university, said Longmore.

After completing middle school, students must work in factories or commune for two years before they may go on to university.

Universities have no failures as a result of the strict selection of candidates, he said.

On matters other than education, Longmore made these observations:

There is no unemployment. Everybody works. Everybody contributes some of his spare time to the state by doing work unrelated to his other duties with no financial remuneration.

Wages range from $25 a month for commune workers to $50 a month for highly-skilled factory workers.

"But people pay no more than a few pennies for rent," said Longmore.

There is no shortage of consumer goods, he said. Color television sets are available at about $130, but programs are all under government control and used for propaganda purposes, he added.

He was particularly impressed by the fact that "every plant in wheat and rice fields was planted and harvested by hand."

Longmore said many Canadians would find it difficult to live in as confined housing space as the Chinese do, but he added there was no housing shortage there.

"We might also find it difficult to share bathroom and kitchen facilities with seven or eight other families, but the Chinese have no problem," he said.

There was no crime, he said. Anyone can leave doors unlocked.

"You could leave money on the street and nobody would take it. It's strange to have someone follow you for five blocks telling you he didn't give you enough change," he said.

No grant, no answers—chamber

The Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce held a gun to the city's finance committee's head Thursday, but the aldermen would only agree to a conditional surrender.

At issue was the chamber's traditional service of answering inquiries from other parts of B.C., Canada and the world.

Since 1960, the chamber has received an annual grant of $2,500 for this service, first from the city, then from the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee.

This year, the intermunicipal committee turned down the request and a delegation from the chamber told city council's finance committee Thursday the chamber either gets the money from the city or it will discontinue the service.

After about half an hour's debate, the aldermen recommended to council that the chamber be given $1,500 by the city.

If any alderman wishes to increase that amount, he may amend the motion at the next council meeting.

Robert McHaffie, past president of the chamber, told the committee that more than 4,000 inquiries are answered by the chamber every year.

Total cost of this service, he said, was $7,500.

The chamber, McHaffie said, doesn't want to apply to the intermunicipal committee for the grant every year.

"We'll ask the city every year to contribute to the service, or we'll drop it," he said.

He circulated a selection of inquiries and replies and the aldermen agreed that they were far-ranging and that it would cost the city a lot more than $2,500 a year to take over the service.

McHaffie said the chamber receives requests from school children who want brochures about the city, there are inquiries about business opportunities, and questions from people who want to move here.
